One Happy Man Is the Elephant Dull? Borneo Head Hunters Savings Banks Warned

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1920.

Jacob Schiff spent part of his life making money, part giving it away. He was a banker, but his work was not mere handling of money, watching it grow. His firm backed E. H. Harriman, the railroad genius. And that backing by the Schiff firm made it possible for Harriman to make a run-down, typical inefficient American railroad, a splendid system needed by the country.

The Jews of the world may well praise Jacob Schiff and mourn for him. Such work as his, such a life of ceaseless, useful labor, with wise philanthropy its chief purpose, answers ignorant, vicious and jealous libels upon the Jewish people.

Happy the man who like Mr. Schiff can forbid any praise at his funeral. He needs none.

A writer expresses contempt for the elephant's intelligence because natives "fasten a little wooden bell on a small dog and the dog, without even barking, drives the elephant before him." The little wooden bell keeps ringing and the hunter knows where the elephant is.

"Great lack of intelligence," thinks the learned writer. You could not chase a gorilla or lion in that fashion. Possibly not, but the elephant's intelligence may account for its superstitious fear of the little wooden bell.

It is not long since intelligent man, king of the primate tribe, used to ring bells to scare away thunderstorms and witches, and devils supposed to be riding in the air. When it comes to a fear of bells, the elephant is not much inferior to man.

In Borneo they hunt heads. They kill the owner, save the head, dry it with the hair on and the teeth showing, and keep it as an interesting curio. That is considered all right. For in Borneo man must have heads to ornament his home, and he can't get them unless he kills somebody.

But in that same Borneo, if you steal one of those dried heads from the owner, the penalty is death. This, you say, is barbarism. How horrible to permit the collecting of human heads, then punish with death the stealing of one of those heads.

You see a good imitation of that in our civilization. Men that like to collect gold are allowed to work children to death in factories, mills and mines to get gold. That is all right, quite legal.

But once the gold is got, if somebody else steals it they put him in jail. What is the fundamental difference between this country and Borneo?

If the money of the people were used persistently, scientifically and wisely to increase the wealth of the nation, how quickly might the problem of prosperity for all be solved.

For instance:

The government spent a quarter of a million to establish the growing of Durum wheat in the United States. The crop now amounts to fifty millions a year, a good return on a quarter of a million.

The rice crop of California amounts to twenty-one millions a year. Less than two hundred thousand dollars was spent to establish California's rice industry.

What could have been done with the thousand millions that this intelligent administration spent for "flying machines" without getting any flying machines?

What could have been done with the other billions that were wasted or stolen in the war by an incompetent administration guided by extremely able "31 a year patriots" from the Wall Street neighborhood?

What could be done by the election of an intelligent and honest official spending intelligently and honestly part of the public taxes to increase public wealth?

The people of this country need houses. They are not built because savings banks, instead of lending money on building mortgages, prefer more exacting investments of a speculative kind.

Every dollar in savings banks belongs to the people, and they should have something to say about what is done with their savings.

It would be easy for the people to persuade savings bank officials to continue investing their funds in building mortgages.

The first step would be for a million citizens to draw out five hundred dollars each from savings banks and invest the money in government bonds, safer than any savings bank and paying six per cent. interest in place of the three or four per cent. paid by the savings banks.

A few newspapers could carry on a campaign that would cause billions of dollars to be withdrawn from savings banks and invested more safely and profitably in the government bonds selling below par.

That is something for the savings bank officials to think over. Many of them have raised the interest rates on mortgages now existing to the limit, and that has been their only contribution to the housing problem. It is not enough.

MAN HURT IN BEAST RIOT

SHOOTS 2, TRIES TO END LIFE

Mother and Daughter Attacked by Suitor Are in Serious Condition

Jacob Finkler of No. 17 Aberdeen street shot and dangerously wounded Mrs. Corine Cranton, twenty-four years old, and her mother, Mrs. Anila Liljequis, on Blossom street in the West End today. He then attempted his own life.

Jealousy of Mrs. Cranton caused the shooting, Finkler told the police of the Joy street station. He said he did not mean to hurt the mother. He is twenty-eight years old.

The women were on their way to work from their home at No. 287 Cambridge street, West End. They had just turned into Blossom street from McLean street when Finkler crossed the corner of Fruit street and approached them.

According to Mrs. Cranton, he drew a revolver when almost within arm's length and fired twice. The first bullet hit her in the right breast, the second struck her mother in the right side. Both women fell to the sidewalk.

A third shot was fired. It hit a wall. This shot, according to Finkler, he meant for himself.

Finkler after firing the shot ran down Blossom street, pursued by Patrolman Edward Quinn of the Joy street station. Finkler made no fight when caught. Asked for an explanation, he would only say he was "sorry he shot Corine's mother."

ATTEMPTS SUICIDE IN CHARLESTOWN CELL

James F. Lawler, of Main street, Charlestown, used his shoestrings in an attempt to hang himself early after being arrested for drunkenness, officers of the Charlestown station said today. Lawler dropped to the floor unconscious and was sent to the Haymarket Relief Station, going from there to a padded cell at police headquarters.

ROSSIANS RETREAT ON NORTH FRONT

London, Sept. 28.—The Russian Soviet forces are retreating over the entire northern end of the Polish battle front, it was announced at the Polish Legation today. "Our raiders have reached Radym, near Lida (215 miles northeast of Warsaw)," said a Polish Legation statement.

HARDING LEADS, 4 TO 1, IN WALL STREET BETTING

New York, Sept. 28.—Harding still rules favorite by 4 to 1 in the betting in Wall Street. But there is no Cox money in sight, backers of Governor Cox insisting upon odds of 5 to 1. Some money was bet at 3 to 1 that Harding will carry Ohio, and at even that his plurality in that State would be 40,000 or more.

PANHANDLE STATE STAYS AWAY FROM QUEENSTOWN

Wireless dispatches received from the United States Mail Steamship Company's steamer Panhandle State indicate that the vessel has cancelled her run into Queenstown, Ireland, because of the recent action of the British admiralty in closing the port to eastbound vessels. The dispatches say that the ship is now en route to Boulogne.

Accuses Cicotte of $100,000 'Frame-Up'

Chicago, Sept. 28.—William Maharg, former prizefighter, whose reported confessions at Philadelphia that he and Bill Burns, former White Sox pitcher, were involved in the "fixing" of the 1919 World's Series, will be called before the grand jury.

One of the witnesses likely to be subpoenaed today is William Maharg, former prizefighter, whose reported confession at Philadelphia that he and Bill Burns, former White Sox pitcher, were involved in the "fixing" of the 1919 World's Series, will be called before the grand jury.

Maharg's confession constitutes the latest sensation of the probe.

Mrs. Henrietta B. Kelly, owner of an apartment building in which several White Sox players lived, "Kid" Gleason, manager of the White Sox, and Ray Schalk, star catcher, are witnesses likely to be called on to testify today.

According to Maharg's story, he met Bill Burns, an old friend, in New York, and Cicotte approached Burns in a room in the Ansonia Hotel with an offer to "throw" the series if Burns could find some one to put up $100,000.

Burns talked it over with Maharg and then went to Arnold Rothstein, New York gambler, with the proposition.

Rothstein, Maharg said, turned the scheme down, but later Burns telegraphed him that Rothstein had "some through." Burns afterward told Maharg, he says, that he had encountered Abe Attell and that Attell had "fixed things" with Kelly.

Attell came to Cincinnati, Maharg said, with a bunch of gamblers and established headquarters at the Sinton Hotel. Burns and Maharg went there to get the $100,000 from Attell to turn over to the White Sox players. Attell "stalled them off," Maharg said, claiming that they needed the money to bet on the games.

Attell finally gave them $10,000, Maharg said, but the remaining $90,000 never was paid.

Eddie Cicotte, the pitcher mentioned, emphatically denied today that he had entered into any dishonest deal with Burns. He admitted meeting Burns in the New York hotel, but said that they met casually and that a number of other players were there. Cicotte and Burns were "buddies" when Burns played with the Sox. Cicotte characterized Maharg's charges as "lies."

U. S. JUDGE WILL QUIZ McCARTHY

Morton Calls Revenue Officers' Statements "Fishy" in Liquor Case

Declaring that statements of revenue officers sounded "fishy" and that he would find out what was being done in this district, Judge Morton announced in the Federal Court today that he would summon Prohibition Enforcement Agent William J. McCarthy before him next Thursday.

The announcement was made in connection with a petition for the return of a barrel of whiskey and a barrel of brandy seized at the home of Richard Anderson of No. 59 Margin street, Harrhill.

Anderson, who was arrested at the time, claimed that he purchased the liquor before January 15, and was discharged by United States Commissioner Hayes before whom he was arraigned.

The petition, filed by Attorney Thomas Ahern and the first of its kind, declared that the liquor was illegally seized, and asked that Agent McCarthy be called into court to show why it should not be returned. Attorney Ahern said that nineteen quarts of the amount seized disappeared in the police station, but that he and action Agent McCarthy his client was willing to receive back the remainder. He received no reply, he stated.

Against United States Attorney Hurley supposed that Attorney Hurley supposed that Attorney Hurley his papers to bring the revenue officers into court. Judge Morton dismissed, and then said:

"It is the government to be thus placed in the position of being prodded and forced to do its duty? It appears from the facts before me that the revenue officers have not done their duty in proceeding against the liquor after seizing it.

"The whole circumstances of the statement of the revenue officers sounds very fishy. Evidently the federal agents went into this man's cellar carefully. Then for four months they failed to proceed against the liquor seized. Now it is claimed that a subsequent seizure has been made by internal revenue agents.

"On Thursday Mr. McCarthy is to come into this court and either file a disclaimer or defend this petition. We will find out what is being done in this district."

The case was then continued to next Thursday.

BOOKKEEPER GUILTY OF THEFT BY CHECKS

Jacob J. Zimmerman of Elm street, Cambridge, was arraigned in Cambridge District Court today charged with larceny of about $70 from the Central Hardware Company of Cambridge, by whom he was employed as bookkeeper. Zimmerman, who it was said obtained the money by forging checks, was found guilty and given a suspended sentence to the reformatory.

25,000 MAY ATTEND NIGHT SCHOOL HERE

The total enrollment of Boston night schools may reach 25,000 this year, Superintendent Thompson said today. Increased immigration and fewer jobs at high wages were the chief reasons given by school officials for the greater interest in night schools. There are nine high schools, twelve elementary schools and trade schools for both men and women in the section of night classes.

Bank Crisis Relieved; Fidelity Closed

The Fidelity Trust Company at No. 148 State street was temporarily closed today by Bank Commissioner Joseph C. Allen. His action followed one of the most important conferences ever held in local banking circles, which lasted five hours last night at the State House. The conference was attended by more than a score of the leading bankers of the city.

Bank Commissioner Allen announced at the end of the conference that he closed the doors of the Fidelity Trust because of the "steady withdrawal of deposits and slow and doubtful loans."

Officials of the Fidelity Trust Company, headed by President of the senate Edwin T. McKnight, vice-president of the company, pleaded at the conference for the support of the clearing house committee, which would enable it to continue business today.

Yesterday it invoked the ninety-day clause requiring that much notice of intentions of depositors to withdraw funds.

The City of Boston, which late last year had $100,000 in the Fidelity

SCHOOL 'SNOBS' DENOUNCED

Somerville Board Member Moves to Abolish Secret Societies of Pupils

Secret societies will be tabred from Somerville schools if a resolution presented by School Committeeman Daniel H. Bradley is adopted. The resolution declares:

"All pupils and teachers of Somerville schools are hereby forbidden to become members of any secret society bearing the names of the schools or organization therewith."

The object of his move, Committeeman Bradley said, was to eliminate snobbishness, which he asserted was growing at an alarming rate. He has learned of one of these societies, he declared, whose twelve members do not associate with other pupils in some cases, he said, the fraternity men have even refuse to speak to anyone not in their own clan.

Another harmful influence of the secret society, he said, was its tendency to distract the pupil from his school work. A large percentage of pupils who belong to these fraternities, he declared, fail to come up to the requirements fixed by the school authorities.

The resolution was referred to the high school committee, of which Bradley is chairman, although he asked that because of his position in that committee it be referred to another. The subject will be further discussed by the board at its meeting on the last Monday in October.

Former Treasurer of Embossograph Products Co. Accused of Non-Support

Stone, former treasurer of the Embossograph Products Company of Boston and Salem, who was arrested last May on the charge of larceny of $127,154.57 from that firm and others and who has been out on bail, was rearrested today by the Somerville police on a charge of non-support of his wife, Alma M. Stone, of No. 24 Fairmount avenue, West Somerville.

Stone was brought back from New York, where he is alleged to have fled, Miss Grace Tippett, for whom Stone is alleged to have maintained an apartment in a Back Bay hotel and supplied with fancy luxuries, is held on a charge of conspiracy in the case and is out on $2,000 bail.

"Father, Dear Father," Still Strays Away

"Father, dear father, come home with me now!"

The words of the old refrain to nearly every mind present a picture of wan-cheeked little Nell, grasping the coat tails of her male parent and trying to drag him from the bar-room.

But one would think that with the Eighteenth Amendment and Vol-stead Act there would be no further use for the song. But workers of the Associated Charities said today such was not the case.

Father, according to them, has displayed marvellous ingenuity in finding other pieces to go.

Prohibition, they declared, has not reduced the number of deserters. Fewer heads of families drink, they said, but there are cases of men deserting their homes from discontent resulting in the difficulty in procuring liquor.

Seventeen families appealed to the Associated Charities for aid during August because of abandonment. Workers discovered 117 other cases.

Butcher Shook Woman Customer; Pays $15

Morris Abrahams, proprietor of a meat market at No. 171 West Broadway, South Boston, was found guilty in South Boston Court today of assault and battery upon Mrs. Catherine Lyons, of No. 87 West Broadway, a former customer. He was fined $15 and appealed.

Mrs. Lyons conducts a boarding house. She had her account with Abrahams ranged from $50 to $70 weekly until she decided to discontinue trading there. While passing the store Thursday, she said, Abrahams pulled her from the sidewalk to the interior of his shop and demanded an explanation of her discontinued patronage. He also shook her so forcibly, she charged, that several buttons were torn from her coat.

PRISONER, FINED $15, TO RESTORE PROPERTY

Hine Company, was found guilty in the South Boston Court today of the largest of a case of dry goods, valued at $200, from a New Haven Railroad warehouse. In consideration of the restitution of the goods and the fact that it was Oakes' first offence, the court fined him $15.

The lord mayor of London was informed by the prison authorities that MacSwiney was "weakening perceptibly," and had lost weight during the night.

By International News Service.

Belfast, Sept. 28.—More than a score of persons were injured in a great outbreak of rioting here today.

Following a series of clashes early in the day, during which seven persons were hurt, the soldiers cleared the streets at the point of the bayonet.

Later violence was renewed, the rioting extending into Karl street. Reinforcements of soldiers were rushed to the scene and the streets were patrolled by troops in armored cars with automatic service pistols in their hands. Tanks were concentrated and held in readiness.

BOSTON BANKING CIRCLES "ALMOST NORMAL" AFTER FLURRY

MANY DEPOSITORS RESTORE FUNDS THEY WITHDREW

Trust Company, did not have a cent on deposit there when the bank was closed.

As late as September 14 there was $24,893.46 of city money in the bank. It was withdrawn on that day by City Treasurer Murray.

Treasurer Murray has withdrawn money from nearly all the six trust companies which recently got in trouble, chiefly before they were ordered closed.

There was $45,747.07 of State money on deposit with the Fidelity Trust Company when it was closed. The State, like the city, had been withdrawing money at a rapid rate. On September 3, when State Treasurer James Jackson assumed office, there was $209,650.40 on deposit in the bank. That very day it was reduced to $164,605.70.

Bankers who met at the State House last night agreed that the Boston Clearing House Committee today would announce a plan by which the big banks would aid smaller trust companies which are in difficulties by reason of heavy withdrawals and which are found to be solvent. This was the understanding of the result of the conference given the American today by a State official. He explained that the members of the conference were to report their agreement to financial headquarters today and that if the agreement met with their approval the clearing house committee statement would be forthcoming later.

TENSION IS RELIEVED.

A return to "almost normal" was reported today by officials of the several Boston trust companies which have been in difficulties the last few days.

No disorder attended the formal closing of the Fidelity Trust Company, taken over by Bank Commissioner Allen. A small crowd of curious persons gathered at the usual opening hour outside the main office on State street and the Washington street branch, but the police on duty there had nothing to do.

The Dorchester Trust Company and the Tremont Trust Company, which stopped payments on savings accounts yesterday, under the ninety-day clause, were quiet today.

The Dorchester company opened the doors at its Upham corner office and its Fields Corner branch at the usual hour. There was the usual activity in the checking and commercial departments.

Many depositors who were swept along in the wave of apprehension yesterday restored their accounts today. In this they had the example of many Dorcester business men, who made exceptionally large deposits in an endeavor to stem the tide.

There was considerable relief among Dorchester home owners. Many of these people have borrowed money from the Dorchester Trust, and it was for a time feared the company would be forced to call in all mortgages. This danger has passed.

All was quiet at the Tremont Trust Company. A few of those who always congregate at the scene of trouble were on hand. A few belated depositors appeared. But they were halted at the door with the news that no money was being paid on deposits and departed without any demonstration.

Bank Commissioner Allen's formal statement closing the Fidelity Trust Company follows.

"It has become necessary for the commissioner of banks to take possession of the Fidelity Trust Company of Boston this morning at o'clock. The reasons which make this step necessary are the same which brought about the closing of the Cosmopolitan Trust Company, namely: Steady withdrawals of deposits and slow and doubtful loans."

COOLIDGE ISSUES APPEAL.

Governor Coolidge has issued a plea to the public to refrain from hysteria which brought thousands of depositors to the doors of Boston banks yesterday.

The Governor declared that money in any bank in the State was safer than in one's pocket or house.

The Tremont Trust Company announces that its deposits for the day were $516,167 greater than the amount taken out by depositors. The Dorchester Trust Company also reports that their deposits were heavy.

A double guard was thrown about Boston banks today and this protection will remain indefinitely in effect. It was stated that this is merely a precaution and does not mean that more trouble is expected. The guard was established last night and early today was ordered doubled.

The banks which adopted the ninety-day payment will make payments on demand just as soon as the public regains confidence in the situation. This, it was stated today by bank officials, is not many days off.

MORIARTY CAUTIONS PUBLIC.

Acting Mayor Moriarty joins with Governor Coolidge in cautioning the people to exercise calm judgment during the present situation. He said:

"The unusual banking situation which started Saturday and rapidly developed today is such that every agency interested in the welfare of Boston and its financial institutions should lend every assistance to allay the fears of those with deposits in the various banks of the city.

"With knowledge of today's situation in mind, and in the absence of the Mayor, I deem it advisable to caution the public to exercise calm judgment in a situation that requires only sound common sense for a proper solution."

He made this statement after conferring with City Auditor J. Alfred Mitchell, City Treasurer Thomas W. Murray and Budget Commissioner Rupert Carven.

THANK DEPOSITORS.

The Tremont Trust Company has issued an expression of thanks to its depositors "who displayed their confidence and trust" in the institution and predicting that the ninety-day clause on payments will soon be lifted. The statement of the executive committee of the bank follows:

"The calm has set in. The excitement is abating. Things will be normal again in a few days. We like some other banks, deemed it wise to invoke the ninety-day law in our savings department to protect the people against their hysteria.

"We want to express our thanks and appreciation for the loyal support of our cool headed depositors and friends, who displayed their confidence and trust in our institution by making deposits aggregating hundreds and hundreds of thousands of dollars.

"There is no cloud without a silver lining, and the passing cloud has its silver lining in its demonstration that we stand on a firm foundation.

"We regret that the ninety-day law had to be invoked, but it will be lifted as soon as the excitement is over. Other than requiring this notice in the savings department, our business is going on as usual. Time will never dim our appreciation of those who stood firm in this crisis.

"Executive committee, Tremont Trust Company: Asa P. French, President, Simon E. Sweetser, Jr., Vice Pres., David I. Robinson, Harry Roberts, Charles W. Levi, Gulbert H. Noyes, Thomas J. Boynton, George T. Shannon, John S. Slater, Samuel Feinberg."

Governor Coolidge's statement to the public follows:

"Money is safer in any Massachusetts bank than in anybody's pocket or house. There is no reason why banks in which there have been runs are not solvent. I suggested some time ago that the banks co-operate and support each other, so that not bank that is solvent should be forced to close its doors for lack of funds to meet demands of depositors. The meaning of the Federal Reserve Act is that banks sustain each other. Let the public be assured that its money is absolutely safe in these banks."

Gary Routs Gould in Dispute on Liner

By International News Service.

Paris, Sept. 28.—When the French liner France docks at New York at the end of this week Judge E. H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, will be found occupying the special luxury suite provided for American multi-millionaires, although it looked for a time as though he would have to content himself with an ordinary cabin.

Details of a mixup which led to a dispute between Judge Gary and George J. Gould for the possession of the finest suite on the liner were printed by the newspaper Gaulois. Judge Gary reserved the suite a fortnight before the ship sailed. When servants were sent to register the Gary baggage it was found that Mr. Gould was in possession of the special luxury cabin.

The chief steward produced a telegram signed "Gary" cancelling his reservation. It then developed that it was another American of the name of Gary who had sent the message. Judge Gary asked Mr. Gould to surrender the suite. The latter refused at first, but finally consented. The France sailed from Havre on Sunday night.

DENIES McKNIGHT OWNS SOUTH BOSTON BANKS

President Joseph A. Maynard of the South Boston Trust Co. takes exception to statements connecting his institution with the Fidelity Trust Co., or any other company connected with Edwin T. McKnight.

"While I am speaking for the South Boston Trust Co., and not for the South Boston Savings Bank, I will say that neither has the latter institution any connection with Mr. McKnight's bank," said President Maynard.

"The South Boston Trust Co. is not and never had been connected with Mr. McKnight's bank. It is a separate institution and not a subsidiary or any of Mr. McKnight's banks. Mr. McKnight is not a director of our bank and never has been.

"Of the 2,000 shares of the South Boston Trust Co., 1,630 are owned in South Boston.

Prices Coming Down

New York, Sept. 28.—A leading American wholesale sugar firm here announces sugar today at 14 cents a pound, a reduction of ½ a cent from its previous quotation.

New York, Sept. 28.—A further reduction in the prices of women's clothing was anticipated because of the failure of women to respond to the mark-downs already made in Fall suits.

New York, Sept. 28.—Flour tumbled another 50 to 65 cents a barrel here. Potatoes also continued to drop in price.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—A. R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker Corporation, automobile manufacturers, announced today a cut of from $125 to $200 in all models of cars manufactured by his concern. The cut becomes effective immediately, he said.

Montreal, Sept. 28.—Sugar is selling here at 19½ cents a pound, reduced from 21 cents by the sugar refiners. A 50-cent reduction was made in flour, which can now be bought at retail for $13.50 a barrel and at $13 wholesale.

HUGE CREDITS HINTS SCANDAL IN BONDS

Official See Grave Danger in Possible Flood of Exchange Upon Market

Paid-off Securities Stolen from Treasury Now in Circulation, It Is Charged

Washington, Sept. 28.—American credit amounting to $2,000,000,000 extended to foreign nations and their commercial interests, is now held in suspense, because of the breakdown of foreign currencies. It was revealed today by the Treasury Department. This sum is in addition to the $10,090,000,000 in loans made by this government to foreign powers, which remain unpaid.

"Government officials were in doubt over the effect on the domestic situation of this stupendous debt which foreign interests appear powerless to liquidate. Practically the whole of the $2,000,000,000 represents the balance of trade in favor of the United States in the period since the war ended.

Officials saw the possibilities of grave danger if a considerable volume of exchange should be released and thrown upon the market. This, they were convinced, would result in depressing quotations and produce further uncertainty in the foreign exchange market.

No accurate figures were available to indicate exactly how current indebtedness of the foreign groups of debtors is being maintained. The Federal Reserve Board's latest advices show some of this indebtedness consists of balances on the books of foreign banks, established there in favor of American creditors, and which has not been withdrawn because of unfavorable exchange conditions.

It also includes merchandise balances, amounting to huge sums. The extent of these merchandise balances, officials explained, is the result of long extensions of credit granted by American export houses to relieve their foreign customers of pressure for immediate funds.

But another part of the indebtedness consists of short term obligations of various kinds, which are steadily maturing and which must be taken care of out of the proceeds of current exportations from European countries to the United States.

Washington, Sept. 28.—The startling charge hat many millions of dollars in duplicate numbered Liberty Bonds are in circulation in the United States was made public here in a letter sent to Secretary of the Treasury Houston, by J. W. McCarter, who recently resigned as assistant registrar of the Treasury.

McCarter also alleges that millions of dollars' worth of other Liberty Bonds, which were paid off by the Treasury, but were never cancelled, are also again in circulation. Many such bonds, he says, have been stolen from the Treasury.

If McCarter's allegations are true, many bonds now held by some of the 21,000,000 Liberty Bond subscribers have already been paid off by the government. It would appear, however, that this stupendous loss, bing due to the alleged carelessness of the government, will fall upon the Treasury and not upon holders of the bonds.

In his letter McCarter gives a long list of bonds, with their numbers and denominations, which he declares were redeemed and reached the paid securities vault for destruction just as they were originally issued, without being cancelled or marked "paid" in any manner whatever.

MANY JOIN FRENCH INSTRUCTION CLASS

That interest in the study of French did not cease with the war is evident from the large enrollment in the French classes that the Division of University Extension is organizing in Boston. A large number of students joined the conversational French class at its first meeting at the Public Library, and even greater enrollment is expected at the next two meetings.

McCALL SCORES 'BANK RING'

Salary as Old South Trust Company Director Rightfully Earned, He Says

Former Governor Samuel W. McCall declined today to give the name of the "real engineer" who, he says, is behind the request of Bank Commissioner Allen that Mr. McCall be relieved of his $5,000 position as chairman of the board of the Old South Trust Company.

"If there is anything mysterious in my statement on the subject," Mr. McCall said at his home in Winchester, "I can enlighten the public at the right time. For the present it may be better to say nothing. Let the statement stand for itself. Let it percolate a while."

The "real engineer" the Governor had in mind, it is apparent from his statement, is a combination of business and political.

"I am not concerned with the Commissioner, the McCall statement declared, "but with the real engineer. . . . In this time of great public excitement and financial unrest, such a blow might spread further haven among the smaller banks and help concentrate the control of the money of Boston in the hands of a few men, so that no one could do business without their consent, and more and more the men in high office would become their puppets; and at the same time it would serve the purpose of a crook as corrupt in business as it is in politics and expose to the blasts of unpopularity one whom it was their purpose to destroy."

Mr. McCall's statement in full is as follows:

"If the bank commissioner has ever asked that my connection with the Old South Trust Company be severed, that request has never been made to me. It was only at the urgent solicitation of friends of the bank that I decided to enter the service. I was first urged to accept the presidency, but that I declined to do. Every penny of salary that has been paid me has been much more than earned and I feel sure the bank has derived benefit from my service. Before I entered the bank I went carefully over the commissioner's statement showing an unimpaired capital and $2,000 surplus. I relied upon that.

POINTS TO BANKING RECORD.

"The paramount of the crime, it seems, is that I was receiving a salary.

"I do not care to discuss his private affairs in public; but I had as attractive offers surely in other fields, and used to be as well established shaver of notes. It is not to my taste, but I may fairly tell say that I am not without some elements of fitness. I have the egotism to state that I know as much of the principles of finance and banking as some gentlemen in Boston who are drawing five or ten times the salary I am receiving.

"I may say that I twice served as receiver of a trust company and each time paid the depositors in full, something that at least has not been fashionable, if indeed it was in accord with sound banking. In neither case did the Supreme Court, which appointed me, declare that I should resign as receiver, as the commissioner decides.

"In the widespread anxiety during the past few months in financial circles, and almost from the day of my becoming connected with the bank, there has been no time when I would not most willingly have retired, if I could have done so without my motive being misconstrued to the detriment of the bank.

"I should have welcomed a hint from the commissioner that my services were not needed, but he did not ask me my views or say anything to me about the matter. It was wholly unnecessary and without justification for him to become a party to this public parade, which can do the bank no good and which its contrivers of the situation were obviously aiming at me.

SCORES "REAL ENGINEER."

"But I am not concerned with the commissioner, but with the real engineer. What a moment this is for a dastard who wishes to deal a double blow! In this time of great public excitement and financial unrest, such a blow might spread further haven among the smaller banks and help concentrate the control of the money of Boston in the hands of a few men, so that no one could do business without their consent, and more and more the men in high office would become their puppets; and at the same time it would serve the purpose of a crook as corrupt in business as it is in politics and expose to the blasts of unpopularity one whom it was their purpose to destroy.

"But it is a blow that only the lowest bred or hired assassins would care to strike. The people know its origin and I will leave it to them to judge its justice."

COAL BARONS, REBUKED FOR $14.50 RATE, BOOST IT TO $21

CENSURED BY STATE BOARD

Increase in April Denounced, But Now Anthracite Is $16 to $21

Acting under a joint order of the General Court, the special Commission on the Necessaries of Life, investigated the increase in the price of anthracite coal in Massachusetts, and, on April 14, reported to the Legislature that the price of $14.50 per ton was not justified.

The commission took into consideration increased shipping rates, handling cost, etc., in reaching its conclusion. With family coal selling all the way from $16 to $21 a ton here at present and no change in shipping rates since the commission's inquiry, current inflated retail prices are held to be proportionately unjustifiable.

DEALERS CULPABLE.

In other words, if the Commission on the Necessaries of Life rebuked Massachusetts dealers for charging $14.50 a ton retail for hard coal in April, the dealers are today as much more culpable as the price is between $14.50 and $16 to $21.

"If the Attorney-general finds that Chapter 288 of the General Acts of 1919 has been violated, there is criminal responsibility," said the commission in its coal report, adding:

"If the retail coal dealers continue practices of such character in future it is suggested that the Legislature consider whether the plan of licensing coal dealers, which was in effect in this State many years prior to 1915, should not be reinstituted."

NO ACTION TAKEN.

Here was an official indictment of profiteering returned against coal dealers by the Commission on the Necessaries of Life and nothing was done about it, by the Attorney General or anybody else.

The coal barons, instead of being frightened and mending their ways, have become bolder, in spite of official facts and figures, and have gouged deeper into the family purses.

Small wonder that housekeepers are asking:

"What is State Fuel Administrator Eugene C. Hultman going to do about the hard coal retail price scandal?"

"What is Attorney-General A. Weston Allen going to do about it?"

"What is Governor Coolidge going to do about it?"

$12.80 IN SYRACUSE.

If the coal barons were not justified in charging $14.50 a ton for family coal in April, why, now in May, should they be charging $16 a ton in Boston and $21 a ton in Brockton and $18.75 in Haverhill when retailers in Syracuse, N. Y., are selling hard coal as low as $12.80 for stove and nut and $12.50 for egg?

The report on coal prices was submitted to the Legislature by Senator John H. Sherburne, chairman, and Charles H. Adams, commissioner. Sherburne resigned some months ago and was succeeded as chairman of the Commission on the Necessaries of Life by Eugene C. Hultman, who is also State fuel commissioner. The report arraigns the Metropolitan Coal Company, the most powerful of the local dealers. It says in part:

FOLLOW METROPOLITAN'S LEAD.

"The situation in Massachusetts is that the largest coal company, the Metropolitan Coal Company of Boston, ordinarily fixes the rate of coal for the whole State, as most dealers follow the Metropolitan Company in any change rate, especially upward.

"The Metropolitan Coal Company is largely independent in barge delivery. The barge rates formerly were less than the rail rates, but during the past year it has become a more expensive way of shipping coal.

"It is believed that the present rate of $14.50 per ton is not justified for the Metropolitan Company, even with its increased cost. There is certainly no justification in following such an increase on the part of the other dealers, whose costs have not advanced in any such degree."

Allston Boys Resent Roller Skating Ban

"Tommy" Blake, who wants to skate and can't, because police drive him from sidewalk, and mother forbids him to use street.

"Tommy" Blake and his pals are on strike against a police ban which prevents them from roller-skating on the sidewalks in Allston and Brighton.

Tommy, who is nine years old, and lives at No. 178 Brighton avenue, Allston, was delegated spokesman by his "gang." Tommy not only gave an interview to the reporter who called, sat down, and in bold, vertical hand, wrote the following to the Boston American:

"What can we kids do when the cops won't let you skate on the sidewalk and when, if you skate in the street, something is liable to run over you? My mother won't let me skate in the street because a boy was killed by a truck one day. What good are roller skates if you can't use them and besides, the sidewalks are smooth.

P. S.—What would you do, Mr. Editor?"

Tom's "bunkie," "Artie" Spencer, eleven years old, of No. 124 Glenville avenue, who has been "kicked off the sidewalk many a time," seconds the motion.

ARREST REVIVES DEAN CASE

Selectman Boynton of Jaffrey Jailed on Charge of Slander

East Jaffrey, N. H., Sept. 28.—Interest in the Dean murder mystery was revived and this community thrown into a furore by the arrest of Selectman Edward C. Boynton in connection with a $10,000 suit for slander brought against Boynton by Charles L. Rich, judge of the local police court, a former State Senator and cashier of the Monadnock Savings Bank of this town.

The action grows out of two years of agitation and dissatisfaction over the manner in which the local officials probed the murder of Dr. William Kendrick Dean at his mountain farm on the night of August 13, 1918.

Boynton, a former Representative and one of the best known Democrats in this section of the State, surrendered to High Sheriff Edward H. Lord and was taken to the county jail in Keene, where he spent the night. Friends rallied to Boynton's aid, but now in custody and declined bail, preferred to remain in a cell under the circumstances. This decision surprised his supporters, who are numerous in Cheshire County. Selectman Boynton is the only prisoner in the county jail at present. He is defiant.

He says he will fight the case "to the last ditch." He sent notice to Attorney Robert C Murchie in Concord and Attorney Harry N. Gutterman of Boston. These lawyers are expected to defend him. Attorney Murchie may confer with Selectman Boynton today. Attorney Gutterman has a legal engagement in New York and may not be able to reach Jaffrey before the first of next week.

Rich, in his declaration, accused Boynton of having made alleged defamatory statements about him in the presence of a message concerning the Dean murder. He further charges that Boynton had statements published which injured him in the community.

'LOST' RICH GIRL AND RICHES

Prisoner in Old Colony Exchange Says Scheme Destroyed Romance

St. Louis, Sept. 28.—Frank J. Cooper, twenty-two years old, self-styled "Boston millionaire kid," today told a story of a meteoric career in high finance and of a blasted romance. He said the daughter of a Boston millionaire was to have become his bride next month.

Today Cooper sits in a cell at police headquarters waiting to start back to Boston over the navy, he says, dealt with John Rock and Charles M. Bright-well, of the Old Colony Foreign Exchange.

A get-rich-quick method similar, Cooper declared, is that of "pulling the rock on which his bubble burst. Cooper declared he had worked for Bright-well for two weeks at a salary of $50 a week, but quit when "my friend, Tom Lawson, told me, 'Kid, it can't be done. It's a swindle.'"

Cooper earned his "millionaire dollar kid" title at the age of thirteen, he claims. In it he made ticker for $13,000 then," he said. "But I lost it when I was fourteen. When I was seventeen I cleaned up $25,000 on a 'tip' from my boss. Then the war came and I was caught in a market crash and wiped out."

Then Cooper quit the finance game and entered the navy, he says, serving on the submarine destroyer Hale until last November.

Back in Boston he got a fresh start, he said. "I was in on a 'corner' of Hupp and Light Simon stocks and some steel deals and cleaned up $40,000," said Ponzi's rival. "Until last February I was getting the advance of $2,000 a week. I had two automobiles and two bloodied horses for my personal use. I don't belong here in prison. I did nothing that was not honest."

Cooper, telling of his romance with "the daughter of a Boston millionaire" who whom he had become engaged, declared that "her name should not be mixed in this." He tore up her picture and destroyed all her letters before he left his room at the Hotel Jefferson, he said, when the St. Louis police arrested him.

Cooper waived extradition

ASK STATE AID IN TAXI STRIKE

Drivers Would Have Owners of Companies Forced to Seek Arbitration

Representatives of the striking taxicab drivers today asked the State Board of Arbitration to compel officials of the taxicab companies to arbitrate the issues involved in the strike.

Richard F. Lopez, a member of the striking committee, acted as the spokesman before the State Board. He declared the owners should be forced to present their side of the difficulty at once as, he said, taxicab service constitutes a public utility.

Strikers were encouraged as to the outcome of the strike at a meeting held at No. 918 Washington street today. John J. Boyle, president of the union, presided. Reports were made by Business Agent William J. Murphy.

Pickets of the strikers were active today at the hotels, railroad stations and other taxicab stands. An effort is being made to enroll all the members of the Independent Taxi and Cab Owners Association in the union.

Representatives of the union said today that the drivers would be willing to forego their tips if their hire hands were granted. This is a increase of wages from $4.50 a day to $5, recognition of the union and shorter hours.

Is Marriage a Success?

W. L. George, one of the most brilliant of the younger English novelists, who recently returned to his old home in America, has studied and written of the primary relations between the sexes for many years. His latest book has read his "The Second Blooming," "A Bed of Roses" and "Blind Alley," have marvelled at his keen grasp of the social problems.

Mrs. George is travelling with his novelist, and their marriage, now in its fourth year, is admirable and exceptionally happy one.

By W. L. GEORGE

Marriage is not a success—the fulfilment of the idealistic dreams of youth. It is a manner of living, the most natural and most commonplace one.

One of the difficulties in marriage has been that women have taken it for what it is, a whole job, and men have tried to run it on part time and failed.

THE PHYSICAL SIDE IMPORTANT

What do the husband wants to get from marriage? In the eyes of ordinary people what the wife gets, primarily, is a means of livelihood, once which has not been hers in her single state. There are many other things, of course, to be added to the bread in the usual traditions, this comes, perhaps, first.

What does the man get? He gets a home and a well regulated outlet for his emotional and mental needs. In marriage the physical side has an importance which most people are not candid enough to acknowledge.

Marriage, per se, was more of an actual success fifty years ago. The welfare of the household conscripted most of the woman's time. She wasn't educated. She was just a "woman"—wife and mother. The man did the providing and the thinking for the family. He called his wife dull and expected her to be so. She took them at his estimate and complacence. He was the master and brain of the family. She was his body and slave.

WOMAN HAS "ADVANCED."

It is woman who is making marriage today less of a success—in the way it was a "success" fifty years ago. She has found that she is not only a woman, but a human being with a mind of her own, capable of projecting herself in study, thought and achievement into the sphere that is the sole province of man.

Now some of your "intellectuals" claim that the day after marriage one can go on living in the same manner in which he did the day before. The day after my arrival I was talking to one of these "advanced" young men, who maintained that a married person should have as much social communion with the opposite sex after marriage as before. He talked of separate establishments, separate lives, etc. My answer to such a proposal is: "Then why marry?"

Upon marrying, one should say, "My life will be just the same as yesterday." That is no marriage. For the time is successful, marriage it must be partnership. The man and woman must live for and with each other.

"DOG EAT DOG."

Marriage Editor — The question of whether marriage is a success or a failure depends on the point of view only. Personally, I think it is often brought on by the law called survival of the fittest, or, in slang, "dog eat dog." I would not call it a failure or a success, either. It's a condition, which is changing, the same as other things changes.

BLAMES MOTHERS-IN-LAW.

Marriages would turn out much happier if the mothers-in-law would mind their own affairs. Mine-in-law's husband foolish little stories that did not amount to anything and she took him seriously and left me not help less with a baby five weeks old. Now it is two years old. My baby often asks for his daddy and then I feel that old thump on my heart and have to say, "Some day daddy will come, baby, and we will all be happy again." God knows I still love him and always will, even if I have to go through life alone.

A HEART-BROKEN MOTHER AT 21.

SISTER IS AT FAULT.

Married life is a perfect success if both understand and appreciate each other. But when they don't, it's a perfect hell. I am a hard-working woman and I have three beautiful children. My husband is a drunkard, is a very ambitious, hard working man with a small business of his own, and is trying his best for our future. We are always happy!

Now I see the difference. I have a sister who has everything her heart desires, but their married life is a failure. Recently, during a quarrel, my sister-in-law told me that they can't afford. Through your words I seem to have found that my eyes will become opened and that they may find that married life is good and wonderful. Thank you. I am so happy will try to make it so.

MRS. H. E. Z.

THE GENTLEMAN JESTS.

Marriage Editor—Dear Old M. E.: Is marriage a success? Of course it is. My mother and father were married—and look at me now!

Surely marriage is a success. The act of marriage is not solely for the evanescent momentary pleasure of the nuptial night. It should be for couple exists, but for the good that marriage can do in the present world. Success is the order of things.

Is marriage a success, you ask George Washington's father and mother were married. Was their marriage a success? Abe Lincoln's father and mother were married. Was their marriage a success? Thomas Edison's father and mother were married. Was their marriage a success? Mr. Vulstead's father and mother were married. Was—dime! Wait wrong. Stall wrong. Go! bye Springfield. F. B.

SUBJECT FOR SCHOOLS.

Marriage Editor—I think that an attempt at adjustment should be made for the benefit of the nation, and the logical starting point would be in the kindergarten. If children were taught the essentials of personal property and general behavior so as to be forearmed of the pitfalls of human weaknesses there would be more good citizens and successful marriages.

As regards the already married, the one solution is economic sense and the will power to use it. I am a married man of fifteen years' good standing and can say truly that the one method which has done most to preserve that good state has been a rule never to retire until all matrimonial difficulties are straightened out, and get up smiling every morning.

Some may say they would be up all night straightening out, but I assure them if this rule is followed differences will not be able to become large, and very soon will amount to nothing through the daily settlement. J. A. S.

Campaign to Muffle New York Noises

New York, Sept. 28.—"The City of Noiseless Night."

Sitting at a desk piled with letters complaining about bells, horns, whistles, flat wheels and other nuisances, and with the window at his elbow overlooking a plot where structural iron work is in progress, Dr. Royal S. Copeland today said that within six weeks this description would be made to fit New York, which he declares, is the noisiest city in the country.

Dr. Copeland, who is commissioner of health, said:

"All sorts of noise is increasing, and something must be done to stop it if necessary.

"Strange as it sometimes is said that one will become accustomed to certain sounds and not mind them, that is not true. Science has so far established conclusive acknowledgment of those sounds is concerned. Subconsciously the nerves are tuned to receive impressions and expends a certain amount of energy in reacting to it.

"Much time and energy in New York is spent in hearing. Just as we protect ourselves against hearing we must protect ourselves against the added strain on the nerves caused by unnecessary noises. The warning against the unnecessary noises will be carried into the schools movies will be asked to co-operate.

"Therefore, it is quite easy to understand why, with all noises increasing, they are increasing from New York to San Francisco neurotic disorders of every kind."

Dr. Copeland says the source of most unnecessary noise is the automobile.

The antinoise campaign will take the form of public education. There will be no fixed date, canvass to acquaint the public with the fact that it is possible to remedy as well as to prevent noises. A talk will be carried into the schools movies will be asked to co-operate.

Gilbert Jones, attached to Ladder 15, was overcome by smoke at a fire in the four-story brick building at Nos. 141-143 Massachusetts avenue early today. He was rescued by members of his company and taken to the City Hospital.

The blaze was discovered by passengers on an early morning car. When the apparatus arrived the first floor was ablaze and the smoke dense smoke forced the firemen to fight the blaze from the sidewalk at first.

The cause of the fire is yet undetermined. The loss is estimated at $4,000. Most of the damage is suffered by the stock of the Price Brothers Co. The property is owned by Paul Hamlin of No. 89 State street.

MARLBORO GETS BOMB THREAT

Mayor McCarthy Receives Letter Warning Him to Guard City Hall and Shops

Marlboro, Sept. 28.—Mayor Charles F. McCarthy found upon his desk this morning at the City Hall a letter reading as follows:

"Watch your City Hall and dirty shops! We want work or we will blow you up."

The letter, decorated with drawings of skull and crossbones, was unsigned. Mayor McCarthy turned it over to Chief of Police Mitchell, who is making a search for the author and will take other precautions.

Employes at Some City Hall offices were inclined to look upon the warning as a poor attempt at practical joking, as there have been extremely nervous ever since the text of the communication was made known. The letter was mailed late yesterday from the city.

Mayor McCarthy, he says, is unable to understand the reason for a complaint against local shoe shops at this time. While the industry generally has been more or less prostrate for some months, the shops of Marlboro have been busier than any one else in this section.

Wilson Much Improved on Anniversary

Washington, Sept. 28.—One year to a day from the return to the capital a sick and broken man from his long journey in the interest of the ill-starred ratification of the Versailles Treaty, President Wilson today was able to receive his family with the assistance of a cane.

His appearance after all the uncertainties is looked upon as remarkable.

Mr. Wilson kept his stenographers busy with an enormous correspondence. Telegrams by the hundreds of times to congratulations, felicitations and pardons, read a digest of the newspapers and did some exercising on the lawn. He enjoyed a detective story.

The President is at work upon a series of addresses and statements on the League of Nations which will be issued in the closing days of the campaign.

GUESS WHICH GIRL WINS THE WONDERFUL RUBY

Anthony West, Jr., a good looking Harvard graduate is thrown, in love into the company and influence of three girls of the three distinct types that form the large part of modern society, namely, the girl of the telephone girl, a most alluring young adventuress and the sweet "home" girl. What is known everywhere after many exciting experiences, leading from the Cabarets of New York and Paris by night, into the carnage of the great war and finally back to the quiet life of a little Nebraska village, the hero wins the girl of his choice and honors upon her the wonderful ruby that the dying colonel left for that purpose. The story, in all its thrilling appeal, begins next Sunday in the Boston Sunday Advertiser. To say that it is written by Henry James Forman and illustrated by Raymond Frederick is sufficient evidence of its attractiveness.

RESTAURANT PRICES PROVEN TO BE 400 PER CENT. OVER COST

"BRING-YOUR-LUNCH" DRIVE SPREADS OVER U. S.

The Bring-Your-Lunch-From-Home movement inaugurated by the Boston American more than two weeks ago is spreading throughout the country like wildfire.

Reports from all parts of the United States show that the idea has been taken up by workers everywhere as a means of forcing profiteering restaurant proprietors to reduce their prices.

Investigation by the Boston American proves that restaurants in this city are charging more than 400 per cent. above cost for certain articles of food. Some of the best equipped industrial restaurants in Greater Boston, having the most modern equipment and serving the best grade food, are selling meals at cost to their employees for from one-fourth to one-fifth what they would pay for the same food in a regular restaurant.

CHICKEN SALAD AT 17 CENTS.

For chicken salad made from fresh crisp lettuce and the best grade of chicken, two slices of bread and butter, these industrial restaurants charge only 17 cents, while several restaurants patronized by the general public charge 75 to 80 cents for it. Soups that sell at cost for 5 cents in the restaurants of these big industrial concerns, bring 20 to 25 cents in regular restaurants. Roast beef sandwiches, costing 11 cents in the industrial restaurants, sell for as high as 45 cents where the average person eats.

Peaches and cream selling at cost for 8 cents in industrial restaurants, brings up to 35 cents in some of the so-called "high-class" restaurants of the city. They ought to change it to "high-price," as the food served in the industrial restaurants is just as good.

70-CENT ORDER COSTS 15 CENTS.

Persons who pay 40 cents for sliced chicken sandwiches will be interested to know that they cost 12 cents to produce from the best grade materials. Others who buy boiled rice and cream at 25 to 35 cents per order will be interested in the statement of the manager of a leading industrial restaurant that this dish costs eight cents.

Patrons of lunch rooms in Boston who pay 65 or 70 cents for cold ham and potato could get the same order for 18 cents if they were employes of one of the large industrial houses where food is sold at cost. Those who like broiled mackerel and potato could get it in such a place for 15 cents instead of paying 50 or 60 cents in ordinary restaurants in the same vicinity.

The moral of all these statements is that every reader of the American can compel Boston restaurant prates to give the people of this city a square deal by refusing to eat in them until prices are reduced. It is a simple matter to prepare a lunch although some ignorant cooks make a difficult job of it. Carry your lunch and help bring the profiteers to their knees.

The New England Telephone & Telegraph Company has one of the best systems of industrial lunch rooms and restaurants of any concern in New England. In Greater Boston district, eleven lunch rooms, under the management of Edwin H. Ansell, serve 3,700 meals daily. The average price paid per meal per capita is 26 cents.

SERVE 1,900 DAILY.

The largest of the company's restaurants is located at the headquarters building in Milk street, where 1,900 breakfast, lunch and supper checks are turned in daily. In this restaurant employes of Main, Fort Hill, Tandem, Toll, and Central Information forces are fed. Of this number 416 breakfasts are served to girls between 8 and 10:30 a. m., 1,100 lunches between 10:30 a. m. and 2:30 p. m., and 380 suppers between 5 and 10:30 p. m. After 10:30 p. m., the kitchen and dining rooms are open for the all-night force to prepare their own meals. Each girl has three quarters of an hour for lunch, as only a limited number can leave the switchboards at one time. Between 110 and 125 leave every 15 minutes.

"Boston restaurants are certainly charging exorbitant prices for food," said Mr. Ansell to the reporter. "There is no doubt about it. I have in mind a restaurant on Washington street where I used to get a club sandwich for 30 cents. The last time I went there they charged 75 cents but were serving one-half the amount. In other words, they had raised the price of the club sandwich from 30 to 50 cents. We serve as fine a club sandwich in our Milk street restaurant as it is possible to make for 18 cents.

"At another restaurant I used to eat a club breakfast consisting of a small steak, French fried potatoes, roll and coffee. For this I paid 45 cents. Then the price was raised to 65 cents. Instead of getting a steak that was 1½ inches thick, I got a piece about an inch thick, when the price was raised. Instead of eighteen pieces of French fried potato only ten were served.

"The foods we serve are all best grade. My instructions from my superiors are to buy nothing but first quality food. Take our fish chowder, for instance. We do not use codfish or haddock. We use the best grade of fresh fish. We sell an order for thirteen cents. It is a meal in itself. Many outside restaurants in this city charge twenty-five cents for a fish chowder and some of them use only the heads and tails of fish instead of the body.

"We figure on giving our girls a working fuel of from 500 to 1000 calories per meal which is sufficient, according to experts, for girls doing our line of work.

"We serve four-ounce portions of roasts. We buy back of the rump, costing forty-three or forty-five cents wholesale for our roast beef.

"All our goods are bought at wholesale and distributed from a central buyer. We sell at cost to our employes. We feed 51 per cent. of our forces daily."

Table of Prices in High Price and "Cost" Cafes

The Boston American today prints the prices charged for food in industrial restaurants of the N. E. Tel. & Tel. Co. headquarters on Milk street. In adjoining columns it prints the prices charged for the same articles of food at Thompson's Spa, Washington street, and in Stubenrauch's Restaurant on Summer street. The N. E. Tel. & Tel. Co. sells food at cost to employes in its restaurant. By comparing the figures the reader will readily see the margin of profit obtained by the other restaurants. No overhead expenses are included in the N. E. Tel. & Tel. Co. prices.

HUSBAND WON'T HAVE 2 VOTES

Man Is Defied to Try to Tell Wife How to Cast Ballot

By International News Service.

Washington, Sept. 28.—"Our husbands can't tell us how to vote. Just let 'em try!"

A convention of wives issued this defiance today.

They are wives of members of the International Machinists' Association, the third largest union in the American Federation of Labor, which is holding a convention here while their husbands are meeting in Rochester, N. Y.

A labor leader addressing the convention today said:

"Of course you women will vote the same way as your husbands. Wives usually go along with their husbands in politics."

"Well, we don't," announced Mrs. May Peake of Denver, Col., the president's officer. "We have brains of our own. Our husbands can't tell us how to vote."

"They cannot," shouted the convention in unison.

"Just let 'em try!" said Mrs. Peake.

"Just let 'em!" said the convention again in unison.

Later Mrs. Peake, who is running for the State senate in Colorado as the nominee of the Democrats and the Farmer-Labor party, announced that the convention, representing nearly 300,000 women voters, would pledge itself to a campaign for the repeal of the Cummins-Esch railroad law and the non-partisan political policies of the American Federation of Labor.

"But not because our husbands believe in these things," she added. "We study such questions out for ourselves. A lot of men are babies in politics as in everything else. It always is safer for women to follow their own judgment in politics."

MENACE SEEN IN IMMIGRATION

Propaganda by Big Business Is Blamed for Rush Here From Central Europe

By International News Service.

Washington, Sept. 28.—Serious industrial problems will arise if immigration continues at its present rate, labor leaders and immigration officials warned today.

American Federation of Labor officials charged that industrial concerns and railroad companies, seeking to overcrowd the labor market, reduce wages and lower working standards, were luring workers from Central Europe by organized propaganda.

Secretary Frank Morrison announced that he would ask the State Department to investigate reports that such propaganda, in the form of advertisements describing in exaggerated terms labor opportunities here, is being circulated throughout Central Europe and whether this is not chiefly responsible for the overflow of arrivals at Ellis Island.

Within the next few months the country will be flooded with immigrants unless drastic restrictions are imposed, Morrison predicted.

In the opinion of Assistant Secretary of Labor Louis F. Post further restrictions cannot be imposed.

Throwing open the unused prairie and public lands and diversion of the immigrant from the factory to the farm was the solution he advocated.

What is Nuxated Iron?

Physician Explains — Says Public Ought to Know What They Are Taking — Practical Advice on What to Do to Build Up Your Strength, Power and Endurance and Increase the Red Blood Corpuscles

The fact that Nuxated Iron is today being used by over four million people annually and that so many physicians are prescribing it as a tonic, strength and blood builder is weak, nervous, run-down conditions has led to an investigation of its merits by designated physicians and others whose verdicts should be of great importance to the public generally. Among these is the statement made by Dr. James Francis Sullivan formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and Westchester County Hospital, who says: "When one patient after another have asked me my opinion of Nuxated Iron, I resolved to go thoroughly into the matter and find out for myself whether or not it possessed the real value claimed by its manufacturers and adopted by so many prominent people. This is exactly what I believe every honest, conscientious physician should do before prescribing or lending his endorsement to any product whatsoever. If an article is worthless we practitioners ought to be the first to know it and if it is efficacious we are in duty bound to recommend it for the welfare of our patients. A study of the composition of the Nuxated Iron formula as proposed me with the therapeutic efficacy of the product that I immediately tested it in a number of obstinate cases. So quickly did it increase the strength, energy and endurance of the patients to whom it was administered that I became firmly convinced of its remarkable value as a tonic and blood builder. I have since taken it myself with excellent results. There are thousands of delicate, nervous, run-down folks who need just such a preparation as this but do not know what to take. Therefore I have urgently suggested the widespread publication of the sworn statement of the composition of the formula so that the public may know what they are taking. This complete formula is now to be found in newspapers throughout the country. It is composed principally of organic iron (a the form of iron peptonate) of a special specific standard and glycerophosphates which is one of the most readily assimilated iron known. To the credit of the manufacturers it is stated that they use the most expensive form of iron peptonate, whereas by employing other means they could have put the same quantity of actual iron in the tablets at less than one-fourth the cost and by using metallic iron they could have reduced the cost to less than one-twelfth, but by thus cheapening the product they would undoubtedly have impaired its therapeutic efficacy. In my opinion a careful examination of this formula by any physician or pharmacist should convince him that Nuxated Iron is to be placed among the very highest class and most strictly ethical preparations known to medical science. It excels anything I have ever used for building up the system and increasing the red blood corpuscles thereby enriching and fortifying the blood against the ravages of disease.

Are You Contented

with film-coated teeth? If not, do this

All statements approved by authorities

Your teeth are now film-coated, more or less. The film perhaps is cloudy, so the teeth are dim.

Look at them—do they glisten as they should? Do they feel clean? If not, try this new method and remove that film.

That film does this:

Film is that viscous coat you feel. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. The ordinary tooth paste does not end it. Brushing does not keep teeth free.

Month after month it may linger to do a ceaseless damage. Most tooth troubles are now traced to film. And, despite the tooth brush, they are constantly increasing.

It is the film-coat that discolors, not the teeth. Film is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Years devoted to it

Dental science has for years sought to end that film. Its baleful effects make it supremely important.

Ways have now been found to fight film. Authorities have proved them beyond question. Leading dentists everywhere now advise their daily use.

All these methods are combined in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. Millions already employ it, largely by dental advice. And a 10-Day Tube is being sent to thousands of new homes daily, on request.

Five desired effects

Pepsodent brings five desired effects. And its effects repeat themselves with every application.

One ingredient is pepsin. Another multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva, to digest starch deposits that cling. It also multiplies the saliva's alkalinity, to neutralize the acids which cause tooth decay.

Two factors directly attack the film. One of them keeps teeth so highly polished that film cannot easily adhere. Pepsodent protects the teeth as nothing else has done.

You'll quickly know

Some results are almost instant. A week reveals conspicuous effects. The good it does cannot be doubted long.

Send the coupon for the 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the fixed film disappears. And how Nature's tooth protecting agents are increased.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Since the present Autocar prices were established over a year ago we have had to face a constantly increasing scale of production costs. The recent increase in freight rates has placed an even heavier charge upon production and distribution.

When the excise tax was placed on motor trucks, we believed it would be a temporary war measure, and so have, up to this time, absorbed the tax.

Costs have mounted so steadily, however, that the Company no longer can absorb this tax. Beginning November 15th, all Autocar Branches will sell Autocar chasses with tax and freight charges added.

Plan Soviet Overthrow of Whole World

Washington, Sept. 28.—Three men representing themselves to be Americans signed the call for "a conference of Eastern peoples" which was held at Baku, September 5, under auspices of the Third Internationale of Moscow, according to advices today to the State Department. These men were Louis Fraina and Alex Stoklitsky, who claimed to represent the Communist party of America, and A. Bilan, claiming to represent the Communist Labor party of America.

It is reported 1,800 delegates attended the Baku meeting, including Bela Kun, Carl Radek and Enver Pasha. Radek, it is said, made a violent address, declaring the Eastern peoples, if united with Soviet Russia, would be able to overcome the governments of the world. An agreement was signed, it is reported, to the State Department, pledging a united stand against "world capital."

Effigies of prominent men in America, England and France were burned.

THE DEAF HEAR

Maurice Hennessy, residing at No. 12 Dwight St., Boston, said to the writer:

"I was so deaf that I could not hear the bell of an alarm clock three feet from my ears. I was practically totally deaf. There were noises in my head that sounded to me like the exhaust of a locomotive. I read of the Osmo-Chemic Physicians and their marvelous success in the treatment of the hopelessly deaf, so I had them treat me. Now I can hear again perfectly, and the noises are gone."

The X-RAY TREATMENT is proved by the fact that they are accomplishing wonderful results in CATARRH, DEAFNESS, BRONCHITIS, STOMACH DISEASE, NERVOUS DISORDERS, SKIN DISEASE, BIRTH MARKS, MOLES, FACIAL BLEMISHES, ETC.

SEEK STATUS OF NEW RENT LAWS

Fall River Tenants to Ask Allen Why Measures Fail to Halt Gouging

Fall River, Sept. 28.—Not only the tenants of the D. H. Cornell estate but Fall River rentpayers and realty owners in general await with interest the result of an appeal call upon the Attorney-General of the Commonwealth this week of a committee made up of Joseph A. Porter, Alexander Wilson, George Emmons and Richard Wood.

This committee, named immediately following the organization of the Cornell Tenants' Association, is composed of average Fall River folk identified with the industry which has given the city its fame and built up its great fortunes. Like their associate members, some of the committeemen have been tenants of the D. H. Cornell houses twenty and even thirty years.

SEEK STATUS OF RENT "LAW."

They are going to ask Attorney-General Allen first whether there is any law on the Massachusetts books designed to check or punish the real estate profiteer under—if there is such a law, and the Attorney-General can answer a second question—why it is not enforced.

Upon the return of Chairman Porter's committee from the State House its report will be made to the Cornell Association. And at about that time several new developments are expected in Fall River's battle with "rent hogs."

The first of these developments is likely to be the organization of the Fall River Tenants' Association, which, if built along lines now under consideration, is expected to become one of the largest in the United States, with thousands of paying members, no salaried officers, and a legal staff of acknowledged ability.

COMPLAIN TO HEALTH BOARD.

The Cornell tenants have made complaint to the Board of Health. They also appealed to the Central Labor Union and the Textile Council for moral support.

A case typical of many that have come to light recently, in this city of wage-earners, is that of Robert H. Brightman, a tenant of the D. H. Cornell Estate who resides at No. 727 Stafford road.

In May of last year the rent of Brightman's little tenement was $16 per month. Since that time he has been notified of five increases, the last of which—going into effect on Friday of this week—will bring Brightman's rent to $26.50 a month and establish an increase of more than 190 per cent.

"I have been a tenant of the Cornell property," Brightman says, "for thirty years. In all that time I don't believe a dozen dollars have been expended on my behalf. Twenty years ago the front room was papered, fifteen years ago they painted the kitchen."

TENANTS FACE EVICTION.

The Cornell Estate has no less than 3,000 tenants. About half of them are charter members of the Tenants' Association. These members say they will bring the Cornell Estate and Fall River to the attention of Governor Coolidge, the Legislature and the general public this week by refusing to pay the rent increases which become effective on Friday. They look for immediate requests for writs of ejectment.

Former Representative Joseph G. Jackson, who has been active in some reforms and many good causes, is president of the association. Mr. Porter is secretary and Alexander Wilson treasurer. The members will contribute 50 cents a month.

Many of the Cornell tenants, they say, are sure that if "D. H." lived there would be no trouble over rentals or anything else. Cornell, according to the older tenants, was a good landlord.

GUESS WHICH GIRL WINS THE WONDERFUL RUBY

Anthony West, Jr., a good looking Harvard senior, is thrown, in turn, into the company and influence of three girls of the three distinct types that form the large part of modern young feminine life—a pretty telephone girl, a most alluring young adventuress and the sweet "homey" girl that is known everywhere. After many exciting experiences, leading the reader through New York and Paris by night, into the carnage of the great war and finally back to the quiet of a little Nebraska village, the hero wins the girl of his choice and bestows upon her the wonderful ruby that his dying mother left for that purpose. The story, in all its thrilling appeal, begins next Sunday in the Boston Sunday Advertiser. To say that it is written by Henry James Forman and illustrated by Edmund Frederick is sufficient evidence of its attractiveness.

MRS. HODGES CHAIRMAN OF G. O. P. WOMEN

Mrs. Katherine T. Hodges has been appointed city chairman for the women's division of the Republican committee. Mrs. Hodges is a well-known newspaper and club woman. She was one of the organizers of the Women's City Club, and chairman of the hospitality committee for three years.

HERO SQUARE ORDERS VETOED BY PETERS

Stating the action of the council in renaming public squares was in violation of his policy, Mayor Peters vetoed five orders giving the names of deceased war heroes to these thoroughfares. The council placed the vetoes on file.

The squares which the Mayor refused to sanction the renaming of follow: William Pynchon square at the junction of Tremont and Station streets, Roxbury, to be changed to Thomas J. Connelly square; Linwood square, Roxbury, to be changed to William E. Anderson square; Dearborn square, Roxbury, to be changed to John Charles Peterson square; Montgomery square at the junction of Tremont, Montgomery and Clarendon streets, to be changed to Jeremiah W. Sullivan square; Phillips square at the junction of Essex and Harrison avenue, to be changed to Thomas Karen square.

$200,000 HOSPITAL ORDER BEFORE MAYOR

An appropriation order for $200,000 for plant additions to the City Hospital is again before Mayor Peters, following its almost unanimous passage by the City Council. The order was reintroduced by City Councillor John A. Donoghue after its veto by the Mayor.

The money to be expended is $50,000 for a pathological building and $150,000 for the Thorndike Memorial Building.

WANTS CITY TO INVEST SPARE FUNDS IN BONDS

The City of Boston will invest its spare funds in government bonds, instead of real estate mortgages, if an ordinance framed by City Treasurer Thomas W. Murray passes the city council. The ordinance was put over for a week for consideration after its introduction.

LEGION DEMANDS CABINET REPRESENTATION

Colonel Herbert Steadily Gains Strength in Boom for Commander

By CHARLES O. POWER.

Cleveland, Sept. 28.—The American Legion will demand that a new member be added to the official family of the President of the United States.

It resolutions to be presented to the national convention tomorrow, the sentiment will be expressed that the affairs of the war service men have grown to such proportions that it is imperatively necessary that there be a member of the Cabinet to direct them.

At the executive session of the special committee having charge of matters relative to war risk insurance, vocational education, public health service for sick and wounded and hospital treatment for war service afflicted, it was voted today to report favorably resolution voicing this demand for representation in the Cabinet, in an officer whose duty it shall be to protect and advance the interests of those who served the country in war.

COL. HERBERT'S CANDIDACY.

There is still a chance that Colonel John F. J. Herbert of Massachusetts will be elected national commander.

He has not the best chance, but he has a good one and, on the surface, he seems to be gaining strength steadily.

But there are some big obstacles in his way. Chief among them is the attitude and influence of prominent officials close to the throne. Retiring Commander D'Olier has not publicly expressed anything like a preference, and his friends insist that he is keeping his hands off completely.

Nevertheless the report is general in camps of the avowed candidates that the "big fellows" are with Frederick Galbraith, past commander of Ohio, and are not only doing everything in their power to win the honor for him, but have induced him, against his personal inclinations to declare that he will accept the post of elected.

D'OLIER LIKES HERBERT.

D'Olier likes Herbert and has taken the pains to let him know that he will do nothing, either personally or officially, to hurt his candidacy. Of course, he makes it equally plain that he will do nothing for him, nor for any other candidate, for that matter.

But what is known as the D'Olier element, the same that put him across at Minneapolis last year, is working tooth and nail for Galbraith. They are letting loose the straws which show which way the wind is blowing in top circles.

New York, as usual, is playing the game. The delegates are not speaking out for any particular candidate, but are whispering knowingly about several. They do not hesitate, however, to say that they do not look with favor upon the candidacy of any man from Massachusetts. This is the result of the attack made upon their State representative by Colonel Edward L. Logan of Boston last year in the national convention.

NEW YORK DARK HORSE.

They are adding to the mystery of the situation by hinting rather broadly that they may have a dark horse for the place and intimating that they may induce Colonel Arthur Wood, former police commissioner of New York, and for a time, special assistant to the Secretary of War, to stand in the breach as a compromise candidate.

Harry Berry, former department commander of Tennessee, and one of the most popular delegates to the convention, has assured Colonel Herbert that he is out of the race for national commander and will support him. Furthermore, he has promised to make good in more striking way by guaranteeing that Luke Lea, former United States Senator and one of the most popular and influential leaders of last year's convention, will if requested make the nominating speech for Herbert. Berry says he knows Lea would be glad to do it.

RYAN INJURES HERBERT.

The opponents of Herbert were saying he would never be a formidable candidate because he did not have a solid delegation from his own State behind him. That objection having been thoroughly removed, they are now saying that he cannot expect to get there because he has not the solid New England representation with him.

Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont have not decided what action they will take in the matter, but many of the men from those States feel kindly toward the Bay State Colonel. The Connecticut bunch seems to be trailing with New York, and may not be a candidate for one of the commanderships.

The candidacy of Henry J. Ryan of Rhode Island is not helping the cause of Colonel Herbert. Ryan is not intruding his ambition, but the fact that Massachusetts has indorsed him for senior vice-commander, to be put into the field in the event of the withdrawal or defeat of Herbert for the higher place has somehow become generally known and has engendered a feeling that Massachusetts is looking for too much.

The convention has done nothing beyond routine organization work. It gave Commander D'Olier a great greeting, both when he banged the gavel, calling the meeting to order, and when he finished his address.

SHOWS HEALTHY GROWTH.

The invocation by National Chaplain Kelley was short and solemn. The speech of Mayor Fitzgerald of Cleveland was a hearty welcome, but was much too long. The report of the national adjutant shows a healthy growth of the legion, and the report of the national treasurer indicates a solvent national organization and a steadily improving financial sheet.

The national legislative committee's report, a lengthy review of trials and tribulations with a hostile Congress, recommends many changes in existing laws relative to the Federal Board for Vocational Education, the War Risk Bureau and the Public Health Service; suggests changes in the procedure of those agencies of the government dealing with sick and disabled service men and women that will eliminate red tape and wipe out delays in handling and settling cases. It schedules the reforms in laws which it has fought for and won.

Uel E. Lamkin, chief of the Federal board; H. G. Cholmeley-Jones, chief of the war risk bureau and Surgeon General Cummings are here with members of their staff and will be quizzed by the committee. They will also be requested to make suggestions to the committee along lines that will make it easier for the disabled to get the rights which they are entitled to and the attention personally which they deserve.

It will be good news for the afflicted service people of New England, and to the Red Cross and Knights of Columbus workers as well, to know that I have had a conference with the director of the war risk bureau and submitted to him for the Boston American, a long list of more than 500 cases which seem to have suffered from neglect. Many of the boys concerned are, or have been, in the Parker Hill Hospital. Some claim to have had compensation refused without medical re-examinations, some have never received any sort of consideration, and others resign the bureau, and others allege they have been compelled to resort to personal examinations of influence to secure even a simple acknowledgment of their claims.

PROMISES PUNISHMENT.

Director Cholmeley-Jones was amazed at the list and promised speedy action. He has forwarded it to the Washington office with instructions to have each case investigated at once. He asserts that if the facts are as submitted by the Boston American there will be speedy and drastic action by him and punishment for those in blame. Immediate efforts will be made to prevent repetitions of a like nature. Complete data was furnished in each case.

The bureau director expressed his gratification over this kind of cooperation, and, while hoping that all of the complaints are not well-founded, declared he would go the limit to satisfy every man of the purpose of the bureau to give them quick, and as generous consideration as the law allows.

PAINTERS VOTE TO HELP STRIKING GLASS WORKERS

More than seventy-five delegates of Painters' District Council 41 have voted unanimously to render generous financial assistance to the members of Dockers' Local 1181 and to continue the same until the strike that is now on is brought to a successful conclusion for the members of the local.

DENIES KISSING TIN PLATE KING

Mme. La Plante, Named as Co-respondent, Admits Reid Comforted Her in Illness

New York, Sept. 28.—Mme. Georgette De La Plante did not sit in the lap of Daniel G. Reid, the "tin plate king," did not kiss him, did not drink champagne with him, did not walk about his house in a diaphanous gown.

Mme. De La Plante, a mod-ste who has been named as co-respondent in the divorce proceedings of Mrs. Reid against her husband, made these flat denials of charges against her. The charges were contained in the affidavits accompanying the divorce suit and were made by servants of the Reid household in their testimony.

Asked whether she had ever sat in Mr. Reid's lap, she replied:

"I never did. Once when I was ill, Mr. Reid came to my room with some of the servants of the house. After I had recovered he pulled me down on his lap and said: 'The poor child is ill.'"

Church Seeking Homes for Rent Payers

Middletown, N. J., Sept. 28.—Not satisfied with attending to the spiritual need of his flock, the Rev. Frederick W. Stacey, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Church, is also seeing to it that they are housed.

Because of the great shortage of houses in the city Pastor Stacey has appealed to the members of his congregation to report to the church secretary any vacant houses or apartments to rent.

"This may seem strange," he explains, "but apparently this church will be under the necessity of going into the real estate business and several other lines if the conditions continue. Something must be done to house the people."

WHITE SOX AND INDIANS IN THE BASEBALL SPOTLIGHT NOW

FLAG RACE GROWING HOTTER

Margin of Less Than a Game Separate Teams—National Flag Won by Brooklyn

New York, Sept. 28.—With the National League pennant waving over Brooklyn, the interest of fandom centred today on the fight between the White Sox and Indians in the junior major league.

The rival American league teams are hanging on like bulldogs. Both won their Monday games in decisive fashion and the Indians managed to hold the scant half-game lead.

Today Tris Speaker's team continued its series in St. Louis, where two more games are to be played, but the White Sox will be idle until Friday, when they are scheduled to open a three-game series with the Browns. Meanwhile the Indians take on Detroit in four games.

Brooklyn Superior in Pitching Box

Chicago's only hope now rests in two defeats for the Indians in their remaining six games.

While the American Leaguers are fighting it out, the Brooklyn Dodgers will point themselves for the World's Series. Uncle Wilbert Robinson now has a chance to give his star twirlers a much needed rest and in this respect he enjoys a distinct advantage over whichever American League team wins the pennant.

Granting that pitching will have much to do with deciding the issue in the coming series, it is apparent that the Dodgers enjoy an edge at this stage, as Brooklyn's pitching staff is stronger as a whole than the staffs of either the Indians or White Sox.

DR. McCARTHY, COACH OF HARVARD HARRIERS

Dr. William T. McCarthy of Arlington has been appointed cross country coach at Harvard. He started his duties today. The doctor has coached at Arlington High for a number of years, and in addition once served under Jack Moakley at Cornell. The Harvard schedule as announced follows: October 16, Invitation at Syracuse, N. Y.; October 23, Cornell pending; October 30; November 6, Yale at Belmont; November 20, Intercollegiate meet, New Haven.

INJURED LAFAYETTE STAR TO CONSULT SPECIALIST

Easton, Pa., Sept. 28.—Jim Conti, the former Kiski School athlete who was injured a week ago in the Lafayette College football practice, left for Philadelphia today to be examined by a bone specialist.

Conti was playing in the line when injured at the finish of a play through center. Conti was at the bottom of the heap, with both legs bent under him. Examination showed his knees to be severely wrenched.

RAY AND VARDON AT CLYDE PARK

British Golfers Play Ouimet at Guilford Over Links of Country Club

By ROBERT E. HARLOW.

Ted Ray, who won the American open golf championship at Toledo in August and his partner, Harry Vardon, returned to the Brookline Country Club today for the first time since 1913, when they met Francis Ouimet and Jesse Guilford in the second football best-ball match the pairs have played this year.

There was great interest in the match in all sections of the golfing world for it was remembered that the Country Club course was the one at which Ouimet in 1913 defeated Ray and Vardon in a play-off for the American open title. Only recently had to take the Englishmen single handed in 1913, he had the assistance today of Jesse Guilford.

The veteran British pair defeated the young Americans at Belmont, in July, 4 and 2. The match was followed by the largest crowd which has been on a district golf course this year. The only larger golf crowd of the year followed the Ouimet-Evans match at Roslyn, Long Island, in the final round of the amateur championship.

Admission was by invitation, each member of the Country Club being alloted three tickets.

Play Semi-Finals in Oakley Tourney

Semi-final round matches were played this morning in the open tournament at the Oakley Country Club. The matches in the first division were:

E. B. Duncan vs. W. G. Ball.
R. A. Moore vs. John Quinlan.

In the third round Ball beat George Aulbach on the home green, taking two to get on and two putts, whereas Aulbach placed his second in a trap and required three more. John Quinlan of Scarboro surprised somewhat by beating Charles Hariwell, an Oakley favorite, 2 and 1.

Duncan got into the semi-finals by beating L. J. Malone, 2 and 1, and R. A. Moore scored a one up victory over E. W. Daley, Jr.

BEZDEK NOT SATISFIED WITH PENN STATE TEAM

State College, Pa., Sept. 28.—Far from satisfied with the showing of the Penn State eleven in the game with Muhlenburg, Coach Bezdek has ordered intensive practice for the entire squad.

Moreover, it would not surprise anyone up here if the Blue and White coach should make several shifts in his varsity line-up. One or two glaring weak spots were uncovered during the game, and they must be plugged before October 9, if Penn State is to have any chance against Dartmouth.

LYNCH AND SHARKEY TO BOX AT MADISON SQUARE

New York, Sept. 28.—Joe Lynch and Jack Sharkey, New York's stellar bantamweights, will meet in a fifteen-round bout at Madison Square Garden tonight. Tex Rickard, promoter of the bout, has promised the winner a bout with Champion Pete Herman late next month. Rickard will hang up a belt emblematic of the world's bantamweight championship as a special inducement.

Two More for 'Babe'; Total Now 53

Philadelphia, Sept. 28.—"Babe" Ruth clouted out two more home runs in the game with the Athletics, running up his total for the season to fifty-three. Rommell was pitching for Philadelphia. The massive came in the first and sixth innings.

BENTON

HERZOG

STUDY these faces closely.

One of these men seems to be making statements not in accord with facts.

John Calhoun Benton, erroneously called Jacob by the Associated Press, is a Giant pitcher. He says Charley Herzog, of the Chicago Cubs, was present at a meeting when he, Benton, was offered a certain amount of money to "throw" a ball game.

Charley Herzog declares that Benton's statement is untrue.

Benton comes from North Carolina, Herzog from Maryland. Both have been in baseball for years, and both have enjoyed good reputations.

But in this instance one or the other must be wrong.

Study their faces.

D. R.

Brown Favorite Over Martin at Triple A.

By JACK CONWAY.

Harry (Kid) Brown will try to box his way to victory over Vincent (Pepper) Martin in the Armory A. A.'s show at Mechanics Building tonight. If Brown can keep out of range of his opponent's right-hand punch, he will probably be successful. But if Brown gets in the way of Martin's wallops, the boys will be on their way to the exits before the tussle has gone the full distance.

Martin is much like Babe Ruth. He doesn't clout them all for a goal, but when he does score the boys start talking about Terry McGovern, John L. Sullivan, Stanley Ketchell and a lot of other fellows who liked to whang away with both hands when they were performing in the ring.

The Cambridge boxer engaged in a campaign of destruction in this part of the country last Winter and during the Spring. He fought featherweights, lightweights and welterweights, and when all the casualties had been counted it was discovered that sixteen ambitious boxers had been punched out of the picture.

We first got a glimpse of Martin in action at the Suffolk Club last Winter. Vincent had just hopped off a train from Brooklyn, and as there was nobody else around for him to fight he was pitted against Mickey Fitzsimmons of Chelsea. Fitzsimmons is a tall, rangy fellow and weighs around 140 pounds. When the boxers entered the ring it looked as though Vincent would be beaten in a couple of rounds. The physical comparison was even more pronounced when the boys shaped up in the middle of the ring.

Martin Then Displayed His Hitting Power

There was little action in the opening session. Martin kept out of range and was apparently content to size up his rival. The fireworks began in the second round. After a rapid exchange of blows, Martin stepped in quickly and let drive with a right-hand punch to the jaw. He was obliged to hop in the air to reach his opponent's jaw. Then they carried Fitz to the dressing room.

Martin is mean enough to intimate that Brown will be assisted to the dressing room this p. m. He avers that he can sted around about as lively as the Philadelphian, while he points to the fact that he can outpunch his rival three to one.

On paper it looks like the best featherweight bout of the year. The winner will be in a position to demand a match with Johnny Kilbane. There will also be a couple of eights. Red Chapman of Chelsea will have Young Tannsy of Cambridge as an opponent in one of them, while the other will find Johnny Curley of Roxbury swapping blows with Tommy Nee of South Boston. Dan Mahoney of Cambridge will collide with Young Jack Britton of Lynn in a six-session affair.

Friedman and Hayes Clash at Fall River

Fall River will be back on the boxing map tonight with Abe Friedman of this city and Chick Hayes of Cambridge billed to meet in a ten-round bout. It is the first ring contest that has been booked for Fall River since the bout between Packey McFarland and Johnny Connolly some years ago.

It will be the third meeting between Friedman and Hayes. Each boxer has a decision to his credit and, as a result, there is sure to be plenty of lively milling tonight. Both boys are fast, clever boxers and deliver stinging blows. Danny Kramer, the local southpaw will await the result of the match with interest. He is booked to meet Friedman, but in the event that the latter grabs the decisions tonight the latter will get the booking with Kramer.

Young Kloby Begins Training for Siegal

Young Kloby apparently realizes he will have the battle of his career when he faces Nate Siegal in this city on Columbus Day and so has gone into strict training. The Y. D. champion does not expect to experience any difficulty in making 143 pounds at 11 o'clock on the day of the contest. He asserts that when at this weight he is at his best. He says he weighed 142 pounds at 11 o'clock for his bout with Eddie Shevlin. The Lawrence idol was in fine condition for that tussle.

BRAVES DIVIDE WITH GIANTS

Defeat in Second Game Puts New York Definitely Out of the Race

New York, Sept. 28.—The Braves and Giants split a double-header, the latter winning the initial encounter, 2 to 1, and losing the second, 3 to 2.

Incidentally, the defeat put the Giants out of the flag race, it now being impossible for Brooklyn to be overtaken.

Stallings used two young pitchers, Townsend and Pierotti, in the two games.

FIVE GAMES ARRANGED FOR TOUR OF BRAVES

Five of the ten games planned for the trip of the Braves, which will begin Monday, have been arranged by Business Manager Walter E. Hapgood. They will play a team led by Harry Lord at Portland Monday, and a week from today go to Old Orchard, Me., to play the Philbrooks Scott team. Berlin, N. H., will be visited October 6. On October 9 they go to North Adams, and Sunday, October 10, will play the Fisk Red Tops at Springfield. Thirteen players will make the trip and Manager Hapgood hopes to close the remaining games shortly.

WORLD'S SERIES TO START IN WEST, OCTOBER 5

Chicago, Sept. 28.—The World's Baseball Championship Series of 1920 will start Tuesday, October 5. The first three games will be played in the city winning the American League Championship, either Cleveland or Chicago.

The next four games, which will be held after one day of travel, on October 9, 10, and 11, in Brooklyn or Washington, both in Bedford. If will be held in the American League city, and the ninth, if needed, in Brooklyn.

PLENTY OF MAT ACTION PROMISED AT GRAND

There should certainly be plenty of action, coupled with high class wrestling when Pinky Gardner and Cyclone Sanders meet in the eliminating series at the Grand Opera House on Thursday night, as both men are rated as the cleanest of their division.

The semi-final shows Bridson Green, the Tech instructor, in a finish match against Joe Shuler, a welterweight of good record.

MIDDLESEX SPORTSMEN PLAN FOR FIELD TRIALS

Middlesex Sportsmen's Association will hold its second annual field trials at the farm of Howard M. Munroe, Lexington, October 11 and 12. The association is planning a fox hunt for November 25, similar to Bedford. The December meeting will be held in Waltham. Twenty-six new members have just been taken into the club.

SOX IN FINAL GAMES HERE

Double-Header With the Senators Today as Farewell for Season

By NICK FLATLEY

The season's close will cease to cut the stretching turf at Fenway Park, after today. Not till next spring will the crowd gather to cheer the base hit, in the pinch, or the fast ball pitching in the stands, without the players on the field. The regular season is not finally and apparently will not be over with the Senators, as a game will be played with the Athletics in Philadelphia under the circuit's auspices, and apparently will not be over with the Athletics, as "All-Boston" teams for inter-city games.

It has been definitely decided that the Red Sox are owners of fifth place in the American; was decided in the initial double header with the crew from Washington, when the native athletes collected both ends. The first game was rough, but the Sox wanted to make their windup consistent.

FOOTBALL PLAYER IS MISTAKEN FOR THIEF

Candidates for the football team of the U. S. S. Hatchow have to ride a horse, or lively animal, or else be placed Alphin F. Little who was arraigned in the Hingham court on the charge of theft of a bicycle. He was held up by a Weymouth policeman riding the early hours of morning and was later released after he explained that he was on his way to the Charlestown Navy Yard and was only carrying out the football training rules.

WALTER BUTLER WINS FROM DUMMY BURNS

Walter Hutter of Brachmont won a decision over Dummy Burns of Lowell in two fast rounds at the Casino A. C. in Lynn. Young Dempsey of Boston beat Mike Malia of South Boston in eight rounds. Jimmy McDonough of South Boston gained the verdict over Harry Reichardt of Chelsea in six rounds, while Harry Loring of Charlestown defeated Dan Donovan in six rounds.

TWO B. C. PLAYERS HURT IN PRACTICE

George Kelley, left guard, and Dave Mullen, right tackle, were injured in the scrimmage between the two Boston College teams on Alumni Field yesterday afternoon. Mullen was off a serious nature and both are expected to be back in uniform in a few days. The varsity scored three touchdowns during the session which lasted about three-quarters of an hour.

COACH McINTYRE TO GIVE MOUNTAINEERS NO REST

Morgantown, W. Va., Sept. 28.—Frank McIntyre, the West Virginia University football coach, is giving his charges no rest and had the squad out this morning, both at practice and in the gymnasium. Hill, hard at work preparing for the game with Lehigh Saturday.

TACKLING THE DUMMY FEATURES TUFTS' WORK

While no scrimmage was held at Tufts Oval, the squad was given a hard session of tackling the dummy by "Pop" Houston. There was also a long drill on fundamentals by Coach Parks.

Brooklyn Shows Well in Left Field

By HUGH S. FULLERTON

	Offen-sive.	Defen-sive.	Total
Brooklyn .	912	196	1108
Cleveland .	908	107	1105
Chicago . .	922	190	1112

Where did a lot of these experts get the idea that the Brooklyn team hasn't a chance in a World's Series? They talk as if the class of the National League is weak and not much account, but the dope figures thus far have failed to reveal any such weakness. At least if it is a weak team there are others for a study of the dope position by position shows Brooklyn to compare fairly well with any one of the three leading American League clubs in the first six positions anyhow.

I am a bit stunned to discover that the apparently unknown Zachariah Wheat, of Texas, shows up to the dope as peer or any of the left fielders. Wheat has gone up a lot since 1914 and here is Zach right up with it.

JACKSON'S RATING HIGH.

Of the rival left fielders Jackson excells him as a hitter, but Jackson is not as good a fielder as Zach, although Zach's fielding is about the same as Jackson's.

Compared with Jamieson, Wheat leads by a few points—so few that in all practical purposes they are tied in both offensive and defensive value. Jamieson could not get a hit safely against the Cleveland pitching staff he would against the White Sox. I am confident that Jamieson will get the done rating Jackson so high in offensive value against Brooklyn pitchers as it does. Only Sherry Smith of the entire league ranked Jamieson as a dangerous pinch hitting to any great extent. Smith ranked him as such as a result of single hits he was on his way to the Charlestown Navy Yard and was only carrying out the football training rules.

JAMIESON GOOD IN PINCH.

Jamieson figures to hit, in a series of this sort, just as he does in regular season. He is a free hitter liable to crack any sort of pitching no matter how good, and he is a dangerous man in the pinches this season.

There is not a real baserunner in the bunch—Jackson and Wheat being the best—Jamieson in that respect and neither liable to run any risk with any game on the bases. In running with judgment, taking a chance on a hit, and working with batters, Wheat is the better man of the crew, but he is not fast on the bases despite the fact that his legs do not seem to give him any trouble.

No team gains any decided advantage in the comparison of the left fielders, as we show a decided superiority it is to come later. In the next few we will study the infield fielders and see what the dope indicates.

HARVARD SQUAD BACK AT WORK

Preparation for Game With Maine Saturday Going Merrily on in the Stadium

Harvard's football players, after an easy day, got down to business in the stadium preparing for Saturday's game with Maine.

Bosom Pitts was in football regalia for the first time and appeared to be none the worse for recovering his hold down pat and fancy quarterly which makes him a valuable man to step when once under way.

Bellamy, the 191-pound tackle, was nursing a sprained up but hoped to be ready for practice tomorrow.

Winnie Churchill made the only touchdown in the scrimmage between Prize M and the second eleven. He likewise pulled off a 35-yard run. Hamilton and Owen also scored through hard line plunging.

The first Indian Athletic Club football team has been organized for the coming season and have dates open for October 9 and 16 and would like to hear from Hockland All-Stars, St. Alphonsus, Neponset Wanderers, Quincy A. MRS. HASDOCK walked back to her room looking neither to the right or left; her veil was pulled over her features and if she had any suspicion that her ex-husband was following her she did not show it. Somehow the mere possession of the pistol made her feel safer. Moe had warned her to keep the gun out of sight. "You can't put it over me. You got no permit," he said.

To Harry the purchase of the gun meant more than she could possibly have foreseen. It pointed the way toward the fulfilment of a plan he had been mulling over for some time. He smiled as he trailed along after her to think how foolproof his scheme seemed to be.

Mrs. Hasdock paused when she reached the boarding house and glanced about suspiciously. But the streets were almost deserted and she entered the front hall sure she had not been seen.

Next Move

Her next move was to secrete the gun in a bureau drawer where she could get at it easily, but where it would not be an object of curiosity. There remained the purchase of the cartridges. She had deemed it wiser not to have the weapon with her when she bought the ammunition. So now satisfied that she had escaped observation she ventured forth a second time and this time Heliotrope Harry did not follow her. He had no fear she would get away; he read her motives almost as plainly as though she had confided in him, but he managed to improve the period of her absence.

He was not above using a skeleton key and his old adeptness came in useful when he opened her door and slipped inside the room. His motions there were rapid; he knew that somewhere she had concealed the birth certificate. He knew that ordinary prudence would have dictated the need of taking it to a safety deposit vault and he knew that his former wife never bothered to think further ahead than her nose.

He began to search the room and his reward was a speedy discovery of the coveted document wrapped up in a duplicate of the Sunday newspaper supplement which Spike had sent to him to prison.

Heliotrope Harry gave the yellowed paper the benefit of a thorough examination and then folding it, thrust it into an inside coat pocket and laid the supplement back in the drawer.

One other memento he abstracted before leaving, and that was the letter he had written to Spike; he smiled grimly at the envelope with a big blot on it and the memory of his days of agony came back to him as he thought of the answer from the troubled Spike and the apparent hopelessness of shielding Alice.

Time to Remember

This was one of the times to remember his promise to the Governor and he did remember it even as he thought of Joe's purchase of the gun which lay blinking up at him from the open drawer. Still smiling he took the sprig of heliotrope he wore in his lapel and inserted it in the barrel of the revolver. Then he slipped out of the room and reaching the top floor unobserved, waited patiently for the advent of Spike.

It was with unalloyed delight that his old pal heard of the recovery of the birth certificate.

"We're going to get rid of it here and now," said Harry.

"That's right, Harry, tear it up."

"No, there's a better way than that—you can read torn pieces, but you can't read ashes—I'm going to burn it, Spike."

He took the paper from his pocket with the blotted envelope. "There's the letter I wrote to you, Spike—the letter she stole. If it hadn't been for that I'd never have gotten out and she'd never have known Annie Hasdock and Alice Hale were the same girl."

Spike Foley lit a match, and the two men proceeded to the washbowl, set fire to the birth certificate and watched it smolder and drop into ashes.

Heliotrope Harry gathered them up and threw them out of the window.

"It's a cinch," said Spike, "no one will find them now."

Harry faced him. "I got that in her room, Spike—and she's going to find it out when she gets back—and she bought a gun—that means trouble."

Love Drags a Broken Wing—Knowing Full Well That Pity Is Akin to Love

The Restless Sex

By Robert W. Chambers

"WELL, that was what was done. . . . I think she cried all the way back. The Albany Post road seemed like a road through hell to me. I knew then that Stephanie cared nothing for me in that way; that my place in her life served other purposes.

"I don't know what she thought I expected of her—what duty she believed she owed me. I know now that the very thought of wifehood was abhorrent to her. . . . But she was game, Cleland! . . . What line of reasoning she followed I don't know. Whether my love for her touched her, or some gorgeous impulse of renunciation—some childish idea of bringing to me again the inheritance which I had forced on her, I don't know.

"But she was game. She came here that night with her suitcase. She was as white as death, could scarcely speak. . . . I never even touched her hand, Cleland. . . . She slept there—behind that curtain on the iron bed. I sat here all night long.

"In the morning we talked it over. And with every generous, plucky word she uttered I realized that it was hopeless. And do you know—God knows how—but somehow I kept thinking of you, Cleland. And it was like clairvoyance, almost, for I could not drive away the idea that she cared for you, unknowingly, and that when you came back some day she'd find it out."

He rose from the couch and began to pace the studio slowly, his hands in his pockets.

"Cleland," he said, "she meant to play the game. The bed she had made for herself she was ready to lie on . . . But I looked into those grey eyes of hers and I knew that it was pity that moved her, square dealing that nerved her, and that already she was suffering agonies to know what you would think of what she had done—done with a man you never liked—the son of a man whom your father held in contempt because he considered him—dishonest!"

He halted a pace from where Cleland was sitting.

Grismer's Resolve.

"I told her to go back to her studio and think it over. She went out. . . . I did not think of her coming back here. . . . I was standing in front of that cracked mirror over there. . . . To get a sure line on my temple. . . . That's what shattered the glass—when she struck my arm up. . . .

"Well, a man goes to pieces sometimes. . . . She made me promise to wait two years—said she would try to care for me enough in that time to live with me. . . .

"The child was frightened sick. The terror of my ever doing such a—a fool thing remains latent in her breast. I know it. I know it there. I know, Cleland, that she is in love with you. And that she dare not ask me for her freedom for fear that I shall do some such silly thing."

He began to laugh, quite naturally, without any bitterness at all.

"I tried to make you understand. I told you that I would do anything for you. But you didn't comprehend. . . . Yet, I meant it. I mean it now. She belongs to you, Cleland. I want you to take her. I wish her to understand that I give her the freedom she's entitled to. That she need not be afraid to take it—need not fear that I might make an ass of myself."

He laughed again, quite gaily:

"No, indeed, I mean to live. I tell you, Cleland, there is no excitement on earth like beating Fate at her old game. There's only one thing—"

After a pause, Cleland looked up into the man's wistful, golden eyes.

"What is it, Grismer?"

"If I could win—your friendship'—"

"Good God!" whispered Cleland, rising and offering a hand that shook. "do you think I'm worth it, Oswald?"

Their hands met, clasped; a strange light flashed in Grismer's golden eyes.

"Do you mean it, Cleland?"

"With all my heart, old chap. I don't know what to say to you—except that you're white all through—straighter than I am, Grismer—clean to the soul of you!"

Grismer drew a long, deep breath.

"Thanks," he said. "That's about all I want of life. Tell Stephanie what you said to me—if you don't mind. . . . I don't care what others think. . . . If you and she think me straight."

"Oswald, I tell you you're straighter than I am—stronger. Your thoughts never wavered, you stood ready to punishment, not wimpering. I've had a curb-bit on myself, and I don't know how long it might have taken to get it between my teeth and smash things."

Taken Two

Grismer smiled.

"It would have taken two to smash the Cleland traditions. It couldn't have been done—between you and Stephanie. . . . Are you going back to Runner's Rest tonight?"

"Yes—if you say so," he replied in a low voice.

"I do say so. Call her on the telephone as soon as you leave here. Then take the first train."

Mr. Joggles was an argumentative local councillor, and was crushing an opponent's case. "Gentlemen," he said, "you may say, with Councillor Smith, that this is a case of six of one and half a dozen of the other. But I say, No"—pause for emphasis—"No; it is nothing of the sort. It is exactly the contrary."

When a Girl Marries

By Ann Lisle

POOR little Phoebe! She seemed to derive a lot of comfort from that, and I realized that she was young enough and baby enough to resent Neal's marvelous self-control instead of worshipping him for it as an older and wiser woman would have done.

Came Neal then to the threshold, where he stood with his arm thrown about me.

"We thank you, madam," said he, tenderly, for all his note of banter-ing. "And now we may have to ask another favor of you. I can't get Virginia's telephone to answer. I'll spin Phoebekins over to see if her sister's home or no, and if she isn't you'll take my girlie in over night, won't you, Babbsie?"

"I certainly will and happily, too," I replied, straining Neal to me in thanks for the beautiful thoughtfulness of him.

"Oh, Virginia isn't getting back till morning," admitted Phoebe, suddenly. "I've known that all along. Perhaps I'd best stay here, since you're so—old-maidish about appearances."

Knowing Neal's red-headed temper, which matched his dear russet curls, a little rescutment at Phoebe's almost catty use of terms wouldn't have been surprising, but what he did was to reach down and take Phoebe's two little snowflake, helpless hands in one of his. The other hand he put gently under her chin and tilted her pansy face up to the brooding tenderness of his eyes.

Neal Explains

"Honey girl," he said, "do you know all you mean to me? I let you tumble into a nasty little river, there along the banks of the lake. You hadn't a reproach or a cross word for me, bless your heart! But I can't forgive myself even now. It's my business to keep you out of rivers and bogs—even if you don't see them, even if they're so tiny you'd hardly feel 'em wet the soles of your shoes and wouldn't even guess they were there."

Phoebe's eyes were wet as she lifted her arms and put them about Neal's shoulders.

"But I do understand, dear," she said. "I'm a woman—and I do. And I'll tell my dear mother in heaven about you tonight when I say my prayers."

I fled then. Who am I that I should look upon another woman's paradise, or pry into my brother's heart? But as I ran to my room and busied myself with the mail, which, sadly enough, didn't contain a message from Jim, I wondered how much longer I could sit idly by while Virginia's cynicism and bitterness cost two wonderful young creatures their happiness.

After half an hour Neal came to the door of my room. There were marks of struggle and renunciation on his face.

"She's tired, Babbs," he said in a tense voice. "Please make her go to bed. She's almost hysterical—seeing you here in your home, perhaps. Get her to bed."

"Neal," I ventured, "can't you—do anything?"

To Do Something

"I'm going to do something—tomorrow," he said. "I can't let the kiddie fight and suffer like this much longer. I don't count. I'm a man. But Phoebe does. Oh, Babbs, that blessed baby of mine ought to be a white, orange-blossom bride, with lovely things to remember, and the organ pealing out from her own home—the old place where she'd feel her mother's spirit blessing her! I don't want a darn cent of the Harrison money. I'd let Virginia cut her off—if only she won't try to annul the marriage or make things ugly for Phoebe. She's got to trust someone. Virginia Dalton has—might as well begin on me."

"Are you thinking of eloping, after all?" I asked breathlessly, frightened of it, if it had come at all from thinking of running away, after all?"

"If Virginia drives us to it," replied Neal grimly. "But I want her to come to me the right way, and I'll fight Virginia and myself to the last ditch. But tonight I'm going to talk to Virginia Dalton and make her listen."

The Child Knew

A gentleman took his little daughter to a toyshop to buy her a doll. "Now, what sort of a doll would you like, my dear?" said he, as a large assortment was placed on the counter by the shopman. After some hesitation the little girl replied, "I think I'll have twins, please."

Company Promoting

"Why not marry," said Bindlington to a woman hater, "and have a wife to share your lot for better or for worse?" And the disgruntled one growled: "It sounds all right; but some of these shareholders blossom into directors!"

The Adventures of Ann

By Hal Coffman

CHAPTER XXII.

AS Harwood realized that Ann had overheard his conversation with the mysterious woman in the conservatory, he quickly resolved to brazen it out. Bowing very low to Ann he said: "I was just proposing a trip in my yacht for all of you. I wanted you to bring your sisters as chaperones—provided they would come. Those were the plans you heard me mention."

As he said this he looked sharply at his companion as much as to say: "Deny it if you dare." But to the woman sitting on the divan before him this was all lost. She did not even hear him as she sat with her hands tightly clasped gazing into space. She was thinking rapidly and weighing the consequences, whether it was best to tell Ann all and have it over with and let the future take care of itself, or to wait a bit longer until she could free herself of Harwood's hold. She did not know how Ann would take it if she denounced Harwood then and there, so she resolved to play the game a bit longer. Turning to Ann she said: "Mr. Harwood was only saying how nice it would be for us all to take a trip. I'm sure your sisters would be delighted to go, don't you think so?"

Ann looked closely at the mysterious woman and then at Harwood. Her young mind was working at last and working fast. She was putting together all she had heard and the finally remarked: "It's getting awfully late and I really do believe I had best be going." As Ann said the mysterious woman were getting ready to leave Harwood whispered to the woman: "Square it for me and I will do what you asked. If you don't, you will not get another cent from me."

A Throne in the Jungle

A massive chair made of copper, which natives believe was given by the late Queen Victoria to an Ashanti chieftain and used by him as a throne, has been discovered in the midst of a jungle far from human habitation in the Gold Coast Colony, West Africa. According to native legend it was placed over the grave of the chieftain who had occupied it when alive. The natives believe that the chieftain still sits upon the gold throne in spirit at certain times, and for this reason they have never tried to move the chair, which, they declare, has now rooted itself in the ground. A Gold Coast surveyor first stumbled across this curiosity. A search party returned to the spot and found the jungle so dense that the natives had to hack a path with cutlasses through the undergrowth.

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the hair, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as it can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonful of Mulsified will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.—Advertisement.

'CAVE GIRL' AN ENTERTAINING COMEDY

By FRED J. McISAAC

"The Cave Girl," a new comedy by Guy Bolton and George Middleton, began an engagement at the Globe Theatre last night. These two gentlemen wrote half a dozen comic opera books and recently have taken to comedies. "Adam and Eva" was one of their contributions.

"The Cave Girl" is a sort of combination of Robinson Crusoe, Swiss Family Robinson and Admiral Crichton," with musical comedy trimmings, minus the music. The book can certainly think of bright lines and humorous situations, but their plots, taken as a whole, are not likely to edge Bernard Shaw and J. M. Barrie off of their jobs.

Grace Valentine is the saving grace (no pun intended) of "The Cave Girl." This young woman ought to be starred, for she is on the stage most of the time and supplies most of the attractions of the entertainment, particularly the physical ones.

Miss Valentine is popular in this village for the number of dinner jackets and bare shoulders which were visible in the audience at the Globe last night. In view of the fact that she was just here in a horrible play, called "Seven Miles to Arden," her popularity is a personal tribute, doubt it not.

A pair of very large and very blue eyes, an infectious grin, and a figure which would have been heartily approved by the late Phidias, make Miss Valentine unusual, and in addition to this she has a sense of humor and a quiet little way of slipping slang that is fetching.

In "The Cave Girl" she wears boy's clothes for three acts, and, if the trousers are a little tight and the shirts too immaculate for a real dweller of the wilderness, these things do not detract from her appearance.

The story of the play concerns a party of wealthy folks whose camp burns down, whose guide deserts and who would starve in the wilderness if the little girl of the woods did not come to their rescue and teach them how to find food and shelter in the forest. As I said before, the plot is a bit too impossible and it smacks too much of "The Admirable Crichton," but the dialogue is original and highly entertaining, and the company, from Miss Valentine down, is highly competent.

John Cope does a wonderful job as a testy and rankhkerous millionaire. He and Miss Valentine divide the laughs fairly evenly. Mark Smith, as a fat youth, was very funny and so was Arthur Barry, as a butler. Brandon Peters, as a guide, Martha Mayo, as a soldier, and Marion Buckler, as her daughter, Saxon Kling, as the hero and Grant Stewart, as an absent minded professor could not have been improved upon. It is seldom you find a better balanced cast.

TREMONT THEATRE—George W. Lederer brought his production of "The Girl in the Spotlight" to the Tremont Theatre last night. This operetta contains a score by Victor Herbert, and Herbert himself conducted last evening. The piece will be reviewed in detail in Wednesday's Advertiser.

PARK THEATRE—Louise Glaum in her latest picture, "The Leopard Woman," produced by the Associated Producers, is now being shown at the Park Theatre and will run all this week. John Culhenson, scientific explorer, finds his way to the court of the savage King M'Tela blocked by a mysterious and beautiful woman. She, though he does not discover it until almost too late, has been sent by a rival government to keep him from reaching his goal and concluding a friendly alliance before a great emissary of her own country can accomplish it. By every means within a woman's power—coiquetry and flattery—she seeks to circumvent him. He goes blind on the sands, and though she holds the power to restore his sight she will not do so. The climax of the story is intense and dramatic. House Peters plays the role of John Culhenson. "The Red Lane," starring Frank Mayo, is the other feature.

MODERN AND BEACON—Global, the Broadway stage success, by Avery Hopwood and Channing Pollock, recently simatized by Metro, is the feature at the Modern and Beacon Theatres yesterday, and will run all week.

GORDON'S OLD SOUTH—The story of "The Love Lies" of Miss Lisle," the latest First National attraction, which was shown at Gordon's Old South Theatre last evening, deals with the adventures of Caenor Lisle, the daughter of a British army officer.

CHELSEA OLYMPIA—Annette Kellermann's claim to the title of "The Modern Venus" will never be contested by those playgoers who attended Gordon's Chelsea Olympia Theatre last night and saw the diving beauty in her modern comedy drama, "What Women Love."

ROYALTY SQUARE OLYMPIA—Intense and sustained interest, suspense and astonishingly spectacular situations combine in "Tamari Island," which made this special production a notable achievement in the motion picture world. The picture drama was seen last evening at Gordon's Scollay Square Olympia.

ORPHEUM THEATRE—At Loew's Orpheum Theatre, yesterday, a program of vaudeville and photoplays offered splendid entertainment. The all-star offering of vaudeville comprised a comedy dramatic playlet, by Frank Byron and company, who, in his own inimitable manner, brought forth an idea, that caught the fancy of the audience immediately and held it to the fall of the curtain.

COLUMBIA THEATRE — Yesterday's offerings at the Loew's Columbia Theatre contained a liberal quantity of entertainment in the line of high-class vaudeville and photoplays.

WALDRON'S CASINO—Music and comedy, adroitly combined with novelty sensations, in a production of exceptional merit and attractiveness, is the program at Waldron's Casino for week with Jean Bedini's Peek-a-Boo company. Since its last appearance in this city, "Peek-a-Boo" has been enlarged and improved. Bobby Clark and Paul McCullough, big laugh producers, head the cast, and are also supported by Frankie James.

PARK SQUARE THEATRE—"The Broken Wing," the new comedy drama by Paul Dickey and Charles W. Goddard, that makes audiences forget to fumble about for their hats and slip into their coats as the end of the last act draws near and keeps them seated with eyes fixed on the stage and ears alert for the very last word, is in its second week at Selwyn's Park Square Theatre.

SHUBERT THEATRE—"East Is West," embracing all that is best in plays that are Oriental, began its fourth week at the Shubert Theatre last night with no visible abatement of the first week popularity. The charm of Fay Bainter as the tiny Ming Toy, seems to be permeating Boston.

WILBUR THEATRE—"Irene" swings into the last month of its stay at the Wilbur Theatre with the pleasing record of "house full" at every performance.

ARLINGTON THEATRE—This is the last week to see and laugh at "Abie the Agent," the newest comedy from the pens of George V. Hobart and Harry Herbfield, which entered upon its final performances at the Arlington Theatre last evening.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE—Walker Whiteside, in "The Master of Ballantrae," began the concluding week of his engagement at the Hollis Street Theatre last night. This free adaptation of the Robert Louis Stevenson novel of the same title provides stirring drama.

COLONIAL THEATRE—The beginning of the third week at Raymond Hitchcock's new revue, "Hitchy Koo 1920," brought about several new numbers in the entertainment at the Colonial Theatre. Like all revues, work continues every day to get the final perfection, and this is now about reached.

TREMONT TEMPLE—"Go and Get It" began its second week at Tremont Temple yesterday to such good-sized audiences that it may now be stamped as a popular success. Thrills are in such plentiful abundance in the picture that it is almost unique in this respect.

MAJESTIC THEATRE—The acme of realism has been reached by D. W. Griffith in his picturization of the world-wide story, "Hearts of the World," now in its second week at the Majestic Theatre. This production has been proclaimed by theatrical audiences to be the most realistic ever shown on any stage or screen.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE—This is positively the final week of the Boston engagement. "While New York Sleeps," which for the past three weeks has been attracting Bostonians by the thousands to the Boston Opera House.

SOMERVILLE THEATRE—Hilarity prevailed at the Somerville Theatre throughout the entire presentation of "Mrs. Jimmie Thompson," the farce which Manager Clyde E. MacArdle scored right hot off the griddle, fresh from its Boston engagement of a little over a week ago, when the Somerville players gave a performance that rivaled the original production.

CENTRAL SQUARE THEATRE—In its theme, Constance Talmadge's latest picture, "The Perfect Woman," is entirely different from anything that has been used as a subject for humorous photoplays. The talented star, as the heroine, does all the sentimental game hunting, and the consequences are novel and humorous. It is being shown at Gordon's Cambridge Central Square Theatre.

BROADWAY THEATRE — South Boston's pride, has this week one of the best vaudeville bills yet given. The vaudeville features for today and tomorrow are Cello, Murray Girls, Snow and Valmer, and Petit Troupe. Clara Kimball Young appears in "For the Soul of Rafael."

MALDEN AUDITORIUM—The play presented by the Temple Stock Company at the Malden Auditorium yesterday was "The Call of the Wilderness." This is a drama of the Virginia hill country in which Dawn, a wild child of nature and daughter of a mountaineer of the mountains, falls in love with a young man from the city who has come into the hills to prospect for coal deposits.

Shuberts Slash Prices

What Henry Ford did to reduce the prices of automobiles in his recent campaign eliminating the high cost of living, the Messrs. Shubert intend to do for the cost of theatre tickets.

Beginning with their Boston engagement of "Florodora," which opens at the Boston Opera House next Monday night, Oct. 4, they are going to slash the prices of their highest priced seats to $2.

Despite the opinion of other producers the Messrs. Shubert are firmly convinced that the theatre-going public will appreciate their efforts to reduce the cost of amusement and they are watching this experiment with a great deal of curiosity. The same scale of prices will prevail for "Cinderella on Broadway" and "The Passing Show of 1918," two big Winter Garden Shows, which follow "Florodora" at the Boston Opera House.

Coming Events

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE—Arthur Byron and Martha Hedman as co-stars and supported by a company of accomplished players will begin a limited engagement at the Hollis Street Theatre next Monday in a translation from the French of "Transplanting Jean" by de Flers and Caillavet.

ARLINGTON THEATRE — "Baby Be Good," one of the biggest musical comedy hits ever registered at the Casino Theatre, New York, last season, and which also delighted thousands during an eight-week engagement in this city at the Wilbur Theatre, will be seen again for a two weeks' engagement at the Arlington Theatre beginning next Monday.

Profit taking in the second hour diminished gains. Rails and Oils made the best showing during the morning. Trading was active, first hour transactions exceeding 250,000 shares. Call money opened at 7 per cent.

Foreign exchange rates had a better tone, opening quotations being: Demand sterling, $3.49¾, up 1 cent; France, demand, $.0668, up $.0002; lire $.0482, unchanged; marks, $.0161, up $.0004.

Maxwell sold during the morning at its low record price since listed on the big exchange.

PRICES OFF AT START.

The initial movement was downward, most of the leaders sustaining losses on first sales. Issues to open at record low prices were General Motors and Kelly Springfield, allows for the year were established at once by Bethlehem Motors. Marine common, American Bosch Magneto and Fisher. Delaware & Hudson began at a new high for the year. Selling pressure soon slackened and improvement followed. The list was irregular within thirty minutes. Short covering was the chief reason for the turn. Early losses averaged small and the range during the rally was no broader. Oils, metals, tires and steels all participated in the recessional and each group had issues which showed well in the rally. Rails led the upturn. Demand for rails had diminished when trading began, but there were active and figured in the advance.

LIQUIDATION RESUMED.

It was said at the close of the market yesterday that liquidation had been resumed. It was attributed to reports of declining commodity prices and the general uncertainty as to industrial and governmental prospects. Traders saw little attention to encouraging reports as to bank reserves. But exaggerated statements as to the effect of rising Boston banks was used by bears as a trading adjunct. Gradually as lower prices declined to 14 cents a pound for the Rubber quotation yesterday is another sign of the price drift of products coming from New Orleans, where for the first time since 1915 cotton sold below 30 cents. It is insisted that steel prices must come and that there is no lessening of steel shares. Earnings by industrial corporations for the year will not be up to previous expectations.

AUTOMOBILE MAKERS TO CONSIDER PRICE CUTS

The Boston News Bureau says it was understood that executives of automobile companies were to meet in Detroit yesterday to consider lower prices. It states:

"General Motors, Dodge, all of the big companies and the important independents will be represented. The specific resolution to be considered will be whether prices should be reduced now or after the turn of the year. Despite all assurances that the record reductions have greatly unsettled conditions and a full degree of co-operation in industry is desired."

Local Market Irregular as to Price Movement; Heavy Tone to the Curb

The Boston market began with prices irregular in trend and showed small alteration during the forenoon. It was dull and had a narrow range. BANK NEWS UNSETTLED THE NEW YORK MARKET

by BROADAN WALL

New York, Sept. 28.—Price-cutting and the announcement that at least three Boston banking institutions would charge interest on deposits relative to saving deposits unsettled the stock market yesterday and resulted in a sharp break in the forenoon movement in the general list.

Weakness was apparent in the industrial department where the losses ranged from one to seven points.

The downward movement was accelerated by reports of certain industrial concerns suffered in that they are in need of funds, but these rumors originated for the most part in the circles where the wish was father to the thought.

At the opening the general market showed strength, being a continuation of the rally that occurred last Saturday, but turned weak following the first announcement that a Boston trust had posted a notice requiring depositors to give ninety days' notice of withdrawals. As the session progressed offerings increased. The selling continued up to the close when prices were around the lowest of the day.

Railroad shares were relatively strong and here and there bright features appeared.

U. S. Rubber stocks showed pronounced weakness in the late trading. It was suffered in this quarter owing to reports that the company contemplates doing some new financing.

Motor shares suffered owing to general apprehension that new models in Detroit. The consensus of opinion in the financial district is that the automobile companies will reduce their prices.

Steel shares, under leadership of Steel common were heavy. Republic Iron & Steel was under pressure throughout the day and at one time showed a loss of about 4 points. Brokers state that the public is becoming to realize that the steel shares must be out by the manufacturers.

Are Stocks Headed Up or Down?

After a decline in security prices extending over a period of nearly a year, due to industrial deflation, it is of interest to know whether the downward movement has culminated, or whether the strong rally which has recently taken place represents a bulge preparatory to a further decline.

In view of the extreme importance of this question, we have attempted to indicate the probable trend of the market over the balance of the year in an editorial appearing in our current Market Review.

This publication, which currently discusses developments in industrial, oil and mining companies, will be sent to anyone free upon request.

U. S. RETURNING TO NORMAL

Speculation in Commodities Has Been Largely Checked, Reports to Harding Show

Washington, Sept. 28.—"A study of both public and private finance reveals unmistakable evidence of a return to more normal conditions," the Federal Reserve Board announced here. That the process of financial recovery and improvement is well under way in the domestic field is clearly indicated to the board in the reports of its reserve agents.

The fear is expressed, however, that such difficulties of a financial character as may be expected in the near future are more likely to arise out of the trade foreign situation.

Latest reports to Governor Harding show that speculation in commodities has been largely checked.

The very large increase in the amount of outstanding commercial paper in the banks, the board explains, is particularly marked now because of the obligation of the Federal Reserve system to meet the current seasonal requirements of productive industry.

What England Owes

It is reported to Consul General Hollis from London that at normal exchange the external debt of Great Britain aggregates about $4,232,845,000. It is owed in pounds to Canadians and foreigners as follows: United States, 11,046,774,000; Canada, £73,419,000; Japan, $7,170,000; Argentina, £19,230,000; Brazil, £5,555,000; Netherlands, $743,000; Sweden, £826,000; Spain, $2,500,000; Fiji, £443,000; Straits Settlements, £2,665,000; Mauritius, £533,000; sundry allies, £113,500,000. Total, £1,278,714,000.

War Savings Sales

The sale of War Savings securities during August this year amounted to $2,106,367, it is announced by the United States Treasury Department.

WOMEN CROWD MEN AT HARVARD

Twenty-One Register as Students in School of Education; 37 Men Enrolled

Male students narrowly escaped being in the minority at the Harvard School of Education which, for the first time in the history of the university, admitted women to its charmed circle.

There are twenty-one women and thirty-seven men registered. For a while it looked as if the feminine portion of the class was to be the larger.

Among the registrants are Miss Ada Neald of Delph, England, a graduate of the University of London; Miss Lorna M. Hinsmon of Sydney, Australia, who has been sent by her government; Miss Mabel Kelly of Nevada, and Miss Jessica Daw of Topeka.

Mrs. John Brewer, wife of the Harvard professor, and Mrs. Helen McOford Crothers, whose father is a Cambridge clergyman, are also enrolled. Among the first to sign their names for enrollment were Miss Katherine Buttimer of Ithaca and Miss Esther Hennessey of Boston. Both are graduates of Trinity College, Washington, D. C., the latter being graduated from Notre Dame, Boston.

Others enrolled are the Misses Elizabeth P. Connors of Watertown, M. Agnes Davis of Dorchester, Blanche E. Doyle of Swampscott, Eunice V. Evans of Dedham, Helen W. Hyatt of Newonville, Matalie M. Gifford of Cambridge, Bertha M. Meserbe of Allston, Mary F. Osborn of Somerville, Mrs. Louis Prang of Boston, Misses Helen L. Treadwell of Rosindale, M. Margaret Uffey of Brighton, Elsa W. Stone of Boston.

GUESS WHICH GIRL WINS THE WONDERFUL RUBY

Anthony West, Jr., a good looking Harvard senior, is thrown, in turn, into the company and influence of three girls of the flattering type. From that form the large part of modern young feminine life—a sporty telephone girl, a most charming young adventuress and the sweet "homey" girl that is known everywhere. After many exciting experiences, leading the reader through New York and Paris by night, into the caverns of the great war and finally back to the quiet of a little Nebraska village, the hero wins the girl of his choice and bestows upon her the wonderful ruby that his dying mother left for that purpose. The story, in all its thrilling appeal, begins next Sunday in the Boston Sunday Advertiser. To say that it is written by Henry James Forman and illustrated by Edmund Frederick is sufficient evidence of its attractiveness.

Dancing Every Evening

The management of the Crescent Gardens ball room at Revere Beach announces that the "dancing every evening" policy will be continued through the coming Fall and Winter, as in past years. No popular and well patronized but magnificent establishment become that dance lovers prefer nightly during the Fall and Winter in even larger numbers than during the Summer season. Dancers can always be sure to find the best "un to the minute" music rendered by select musicians, every one of whom is a real artist.

Veterans to Teach

First Lieutenant George A. Davis and Sergeant Robert Kelley, overseas veterans, have been appointed to the R. O. T. C. teaching staff of Boston University.

LOVE AND "VAMPING" IN FORMAN'S NEW SERIAL

A new story by Henry James Forman and illustrated by Edmund Frederick begins serially next Sunday in the Boston Sunday Advertiser—a story body who likes a serial that combines the popular elements of the old-fashioned love story with the artless schemes of the modern "vamp" and plenty of red-blooded action will be delighted with the "Pire of Youth." Three attractive young women are introduced, all of whom enter into the life of a Harvard senior named Anthony West, Jr., by the reader into the gay night life of New York and Paris, on the battlefields of Europe, and back in the peaceful existence of a little Nebraska village.

Theatre Employes' Dinner

The M. C. of L. has been strongly attacked at the Boston Opera House through the orders of A. Toxen Worm, general manager of the Shubert theatres, by the reader of the house manager, Francis Morey, whereby a dining room for the employes of the theatre has been provided, where, between matinees and the evening performances, they may eat conspicuously at a very slight expense. The matron, Mrs. Mary Hughes, is in charge. It is a cozy little dining room and was fitted up by Archie Craig, general stage manager of the Shubert theatres.

Receivers Appointed

Judge Morton in the Federal court appointed Thomas L. Wise and Fitz Henry Smith, Jr., of Boston and Charles E. Baker of Melrose receivers in the bankruptcy case of the Boston Threading Company, No. 172 Condor street, East Boston.

Banks Wisely Use Law to Deal With Frantic Depositors

The Fidelity, the Tremont and the Dorchester Trust Companies have acted wisely in availing themselves of the law especially passed for the purpose of dealing with a panic-stricken mob of depositors who are injuring themselves by making demands upon their bank which the Bank of England or the United States Treasury could not meet.

The law provides in the case of the depositors of a bank all rushing to get out their money at once that the bank may refuse to pay the money for ninety days.

This is to give the depositors a chance to get over their panic and cool off and take a sober second thought. This law enables all banks to do what the captain of a ship which was leaking did when he saw his passengers rushing in a mad mob toward the boats which were being lowered. He knew that if they reached the boats they would capsize them and then everybody's chance would have been gone. So he wisely lined up his sailors between the passengers and the boats and made them wait. Even if the ship was filling with water it was wiser to make them wait long enough to cool off and become calm than it was to let them pile pell mell over each other, each one trying to get there first to save himself at the expense of the others and thereby putting himself in most danger of all.

The American has observed before that we have a State banking commissioner whose duty it is to watch over the banks and to stop them from doing business long before they have reached the point of danger. How silly it is then for people to rush in panic on a bank which the bank commissioner has not even criticised.

Senator Harding, a Question

Are You With Elihu Root or With Hiram Johnson and Ninety Per Cent. of Americans?

Copyright, 1920, Star Company.

SENATOR HARDING, THIS MAY INTEREST YOU.

Mr. Root has returned from Europe. Mr. Root is the private lawyer, privately paid, of big financial organizations that would like this country, through some kind of a League of Nations, to guarantee their investments and their industrial gambling in Europe.

Mr. Root is the gentleman whom Mr. Wilson sends over as his representative, not, fortunately, as the people's representative.

Mr. Root is the representative also of many influential personages and interests in the Republican party. It is believed that he, Mr. Wickersham, Mr. Taft and some others, not all as innocent as Mr. Taft, will persuade you, Mr. Harding, to indorse some kind of League of Nations, or international tribunal, or other device, making the United States responsible for European troubles, and especially arranging for the United States to guarantee and protect, in Europe, Asia and Africa, the gambling investments of Mr. Root's prosperous clients.

This matter interests you, Senator Harding. It is not too soon for you to come out with a positive statement, not susceptible of any later modification or twisting, to the effect that you are absolutely, permanently and irrevocably against the League of Nations, in any shape, and that you will oppose with your veto and in every other possible way any scheme that may be invented by the resourceful Mr. Root to make the little people of this country responsible with men, ships and money for the various enterprises of big business across the ocean.

As things stand now, Mr. Cox is beaten. But he would not necessarily be beaten if certain newspapers and certain men should change their attitude toward him.

There are many independent newspapers in this country that would change their attitude toward the Republican candidate in five minutes if convinced that Mr. Root is to be the real power behind the Republican machine, and that he has a plan to annul the repudiation of the League of Nations that Senator Harding has promised, and that the people demand, as shown by the Maine election.

It needs no seventh son of a seventh son to tell what Hiram Johnson would do to Senator Harding and his Republican ticket if Hiram Johnson should become convinced that Republican opposition to the league is not sincere and absolute.

Senator Harding's sincerity is not questioned. But the people naturally want MORE than simple-hearted sincerity, for sincerity might give them exactly what they don't intend to have.

The people want from Mr. Harding an absolutely positive statement pledging himself against the league and every form of the league, and against any modification that Mr. Root might invent, with an eye to making of the United States Army, Navy and Treasury a foreign collecting agency for Mr. Root's large speculative clients and friends.

Are you against the entire Wilson program for making of the United States one of "The United States of Europe and the World," controlled by a foreign council?

Do you stand with Hiram Johnson, Borah and 90 per cent. of the American people, or with Root, Wickersham, International Banking and innocent Mr. Taft?

Buy Canada Flour and Teach U. S. Millers a Lesson

An article in the Boston Sunday Advertiser calls attention to the fact that flour manufactured in Canada is selling in Boston for $1.00 less a barrel than our American made flour.

The agents of our American mills say that their companies cannot sell their flour for the price at which Canadian flour is being sold.

A Boston dealer in flour says in the same article that unless the American flour manufacturers can meet the Canadian price, the Boston flour dealers will be obliged to buy the Canadian flour which is of the same grade and quality.

Indeed, they WILL be obliged to buy the Canadian flour in such a case. The people in this community are not obliged to pay American millers profiteer's profits on such a necessary of life as flour. The sooner we buy Canadian flour the sooner we shall be able to show the American manufacturers how easy it is to reduce the price of flour.

There will be no better way of teaching American millers business efficiency and reasonableness of prices than buying the Canadian flour when it is cheaper and as good in quality.

More Truth Than Poetry

The Chance and the Price

By S. E. KISER

"I'LL never be young but once," he said,
"So I'll play where the game is fast;
When I'm old I can think, as I push ahead,
Of the rosy and pleasant past.
I'll see what Youth has the wish to see,
And when I am gray and wise
I will claim a thrill in the memory
Of the mystery and surprise."

HE played where the game was fast and wild,
And, withered and weak and gray, at last,
He sat alone, but he seldom smiled
As his thought went back to the joyous past.
His blood was thin and his marrow chilled
When he should have been eager and hopeful yet,
And, far from being sublimely thrilled,
He learned to wish that he might forget.

"I'LL never be lovely again," said she,
"The beauty that's mine will fade;
All that I ask they will bring to me,
And the price is easily paid.
Why should I yield to a foolish fear,
Since only the weak are ashamed,
And learn to sigh in some future year
For the pleasures I might have claimed?"

WHERE the lights were bright and the pace was fast
Her jewels gleamed for a little while,
But the mirth died out of her laugh, at last,
And she watched in vain for a friendly smile.
With a hopeless heart and a weary sigh
She offered her pencils, murmuring,
"Please!"
And when beauty passed her she wondered why
People ever were cursed with memories.

Letters to the Editor

Night Prescription

Editor Boston American:

The situation existing in Boston relating to the filling of doctors' prescriptions after one o'clock in the morning is pitiful, reflects with no great credit upon the city, and should be remedied. To secure medicine, no matter how urgent the case may be, is practically impossible, unless a doctor should fortunately have it in his possession, which is not always the case. In a city the size of Boston it is a matter of serious concern.

To enact legislation compelling pharmacists to have competent men on duty 24 hours a day would be rather unfair, and yet it is a matter which I consider important to the general public, because no one knows when and where sickness may overtake some member of his family, a friend, or himself.

Some remedy should be devised, and I would suggest one of two courses, and preferable, both, viz:

1. That the competent authorities establish a prescription department in the City Hospital for night service.

2. That the drug stores in different districts have an understanding, each one taking their regular turn, whereby each district will be assured of a store remaining open each night.

The latter course would entirely obviate the necessity of any general legislation relating to the subject.

J. W. McCORMACK,
Rep. 11th Suffolk District.

With Canadian Forces

Editor Boston American:

Just a little complaint I have to make, as the Boston American is the only paper that is taking up the cause of ex-service men. I am a Boston born boy, my father and mother born in this city, too. I happened to be working in Canada when war broke out in 1914. I enlisted and served 5 years in France. Now, when I come home I have to pay $3 extra poll tax to help pay the American soldiers' State bonus. I don't think this a fair way of showing gratitude to him who was over 3½ years before America declared war. I am not kicking on paying the poll tax of $2, but why should I have to pay the American war bonus when I was there myself 5 years, wounded and also decorated and proud to tell them I was an American?

By K. C. B.

Dear K. C. B.—It happened while homeward-bound on a Huntington avenue car. I was all worn out from shopping and my feet hurt and the car was crowded, and I had to stand while persons jostled me and pushed past me and stepped on my feet. And I lost my temper when one woman pushed by and told her to "go ahead" quite roughly. And the next moment I was ashamed of myself, because she had the nicest sweetest face, and her eyes looked hurt.

And, K. C. B., I want you to let her know somehow how sorry I am, and that it never happened before and never will again. And—thank you. ELOISE.

DEAR ELOISE.
ALL MY life.
I'VE WANTED to know.
SOMEBODY.
NAMED ELOISE.
SO I could learn.
HOW TO pronounce it.
BECAUSE I know.
THE WAY I say it.
IT ISN'T right.
IT SOUNDS silly.
AND ON paper.
IT LOOKS so pretty.
AND ELOISE.
I'M NOT surprised.
THAT A gentlewoman.
WHO BORE that name.
SHOULD FIND regret.
IN HAVING said.
SOME ANGRY word.
AND YOU will learn.
AS I have learned.
THAT ANGRY words.
BRING MUCH less grief.
THAN TO the one.
WHO BLURTS them out.
AND I suppose.
THAT PROVIDENCE.
FIXED THINGS that way.
TO PUT a check.
UPON OUR tongues.
AND STILL.
IF THE woman.
WHO BRUSHED you aside.
HAD BEEN flat-faced.
AND HAD turned upon you.
AND SAID.
"YOU FRESH thing!"
YOU WOULDN'T have been sorry.
YOU WERE angry.
OR ANYTHING.
AND THERE you are.

I THANK you.

CO-OPERATE TO SOLVE HOUSING PROBLEM

Editor Boston American:

WE hear so often of the shortage of houses and the necessity of homes to relieve living conditions, and it appears to me that the remedy could be easily applied by the co-operation of various parties who are connected with the building trades.

Hence, I respectfully suggest a campaign by the newspapers of our city along the following lines:

First—The newspaper to publish the project of co-operation.

Second—That land owners of this city who hold vacant land in parcels within the confines of Boston shall offer said parcels at a reasonable price.

Central Body

Third—That real estate men shall co-operate in finding this land and submitting the price of same to a central body selected for that purpose.

Fourth—That the Building Trades Association shall submit to the central body plans for a series of houses of six and seven rooms—quotas of which shall be built on said land decided upon in each section of Boston in proportion to its needs.

Fifth—That the Building Trades through its central labor body adjust the price of labor to enable the building of these houses at a price not to exceed $4,000, including land.

Sixth—That the savings banks of this city shall loan to the central body 75 per cent. on these houses for ten years and that payments of $200 yearly shall be made for a period of five years. Thus by paying $1,000 upon purchase of house and $1,000 in five years the banks could hold mortgages of $2,000 permanently for the next five years, and that the interest on same shall not exceed 5 per cent.

Seventh—That in each section a building to be erected which would furnish heat in all houses built, and that each owner shall pay a pro rata part for its maintenance, thereby centralizing coal and giving uniform heat throughout the Winter.

Eighth—That all dealers in materials shall give prices to assist in the carrying out of such a project to a successful conclusion, which they can readily do owing to the centralization of purchase in quantity of lots instead of small lots.

Readily Salable

Hence, concluding that we need 1,500 houses at $4,000 each, or a total of $600,000, they can be readily sold to citizens of this city on the basis above mentioned, $1,000 on each house as first payment and $1,000 to be paid at the rate of $200 yearly for five years, and the remaining $2,000 to remain as a fixed mortgage at 5 per cent., which is 50 per cent. of value of the house.

If a public-spirited organization was at the head of such an enterprise, there would be no need to make laws for landlords and tenants, which are not lived up to, and would very quickly bring the housing conditions to a position more in keeping to the year 1914.

In sending this to your newspaper, I am doing so with the hope that you will see fit to publish same and that the idea will be taken up for the betterment of our city and its inhabitants.

Full many a rose may blow to blush unseen
And waste its sweetness on the desert air,
But many a woman still is quite serene
Although her back from neck to waist is bare.

This hungry world will not get cheap food until its fool statesmen stop blockading great food-producing centres like Russia and turn marauding soldiers into farmers.

Never look a gift horse in the mouth, nor worry about counterfeits when you find an extra $10 bill in your pay envelope.

This year's rye crop is double the average, and there's no place to put it except into bread.

Alaska can supply indefinitely a third of all our paper, the Forest Service says. Thank Seward, then thank the Russia we've been trying to starve.

THE VANITY OF MAN AS SHOWN IN SUBWAY

By Damon Runyon

IN the subway are penny-in-the-slot machines containing chewing gum. Just above the slots on these machines are mirrors.

The man who thought to install the mirrors was an intelligent man. He knew something of the vanity of his kind.

I stood in a subway station yesterday and kept tab on one of these machines for some time. About one out of every three men who passed the machine paused to insert a penny, and to take a glance at himself in the mirror.

In most cases the acquirement of the gum was but a bluff to cover the peek in the mirror. Six men forgot to push the plunger that produces the gum after inserting their coins. Three threw the gum away after it had been disgorged by the machine.

Some Wanted It

Five evidently wanted the gum, and muttered curses, and shook the machine violently when they put their coins in a slot that gave back only hollow sounds. Subway gum machines have a provoking way of not publishing their contents after you have stuck in a penny, especially your last penny.

But even these disappointed ones had their peek in the mirror before they departed.

In most cases the peek was followed by a readjustment of the tie, or a twisting of the moustache.

Women would walk up to the mirror and shamelessly take a free glance at themselves without depositing any money, but the man invariably covered his look with a penny. It struck me that without the mirrors a machine would get little cash custom from men.

Certainly Vain

Man is certainly a vain proposition, as I remarked to my friend, the clerk, in the shoe store, where I stopped to buy a pair of new shoes to replace my Summer oxfords.

"I'll say he is," agreed my friend, the clerk, a most observing and intelligent chap. "You take it in our line of business now. We have more trouble fitting men than we do women. A woman can buy a pair of shoes in about half the time it takes to satisfy a man."

Here his effort in shoe-horning a brogan upon our foot cost him his breath, and he paused for a moment.

"The idea that women are vainer about their feet than men is all wrong," he continued. "I'll tell you, Mr. Runyon, if you'll pardon the suggestion, I think you ought to start taking a size and a half larger than that six you've been wearing, because you'll find it much more comfortable."

CONSIDER YOUR PARTNER

You may be in the forties or fifties—strong and vigorous, but your life-partner is not able to stand anything of a rigorous nature, and thus you are prevented from doing many things which you would like to do.

Are you more than dissatisfied and disappointed — disgruntled over it?

If such thoughts come dismiss them.

It is manifestly unfair to your life companion.

Of course you may have to deny yourself some of the pleasures you enjoy participation in if your husband or your wife is unable to join you, but you knew you would have to exert self-denial when you were married, didn't you?

You surely did not expect to be able to go ahead giving consideration only to your likes and dislikes, did you?

Marriage is bound to change your life and if you're not willing to take things as they come, you should not have married.

Supposing you were the weak one in your home, and your helpmate complained and then went ahead and enjoyed things you could not, without giving any consideration for you and your health, would you like it?

Do as you would like to be done by.
